The Harvard Oriental Series aims to make it possible for the East and the West to know each other and so to respect and trust each other.—For us all, as members of the world-family, no duty is more urgent than that of mutual understanding. Thereon depends the mutual goodwill that casts out fear and makes for peace,—the goodwill that BUDDHA insistently and mightily taught two thousand years and more ago.

Henry Clarke Warren 1854–1899

early addressed himself to the inspiring task of carrying on the work of the greatest teacher of pre-Christian Asia. Warren's Buddhism is a noble monument to his scholarship, his courage in adversity, and his prophetic vision of what is to-day the world's direst need, mutual goodwill

The books of this Series are printed at the expense of funds given to Harvard University by Warren. A brief account of his life may be found at the end of volume 30, Buddhist Legends. It is reprinted at the end of the eventh and eighth issues (1922) of his Buddhism. As a part of President Eliot's Harvard Classics, and as volume 3 of this Series, Warren's Buddhism has won an exceedingly wide circulation.

EDITORIAL NOTE

This work was written and the proof-sheets were corrected by Lord Chalmers while Master of Peterhouse. - The electrotype-plates were sent from Oxford University Press to Harvard University Press in 1931.

Circumstances beyond the control of the undersigned disabled him from attending to duties, partly editorial and partly matters of business, concerning volumes of this Series ow outstanding at Bombay and Gostingen and Oxford and here. Among them was this volume, some plate-revision and the press-work of which were long delayed.

That the date of the Preface (1931) differs from that of the title-page (1932), is not an oversight, but the record of a deplorable fact. I hope the delay has not annoyed Lord Chalmers as sorely as it has distressed me. His patience and kindness have been unfailing

PREFACE

Some time ago, when reading the Sutta-Nipāta, I was led to the conclusion that, while all verse when translated should receive a metrical rendering, it was particularly desirable to make the attempt here, so as to emphasize in English the historically significant varieties of versification found in the Pāli. In 1928 Professor Lanman suggested that, with a Pāli text on the opposite page (as in the Loeb Classics), my metrical experiment should find a place in the Harvard Oriental Series. This volume is the outcome of his suggestion.

My Pāli text has been based on Fausböll's editio princeps of 1885 and on the 'new edition' of 1913 for the Pāli Text Society (by Andersen and Helmer Smith),—as modified by the subsequent P.T.S. editions of the Commentary on the Sutta-Nipāta (Paramatthajotikā II) and of the canonical Niddesa. The conclusion borne in on me was that, apart from minor matters and a very few real divergences of readings, the text of the Sutta-Nipāta (thanks to this distinguished paramparā of Danish scholars) was practically now a textus receptus; and that, in a volume which is primarily intended for English readers, it was unnecessary to discuss various readings which Pāli scholars can readily investigate in the authorities quoted above. Where I have differed, I have aimed at the restoration, not at the conjectural emendation, of the text.

Nor, in the matter of interpretation of the text, have I thought it desirable to cumber the translation with polemic notes or with a record of others' renderings. I have therefore confined myself to an examination (in the Introduction) into the literary evolution of the Sutta-Nipāta, so far as it can be traced to-day, and will let the version speak for itself as a commentary no less than as a rendering.

My conclusion is that, while its materials are by no means all of equal antiquity, there is no older book in Buddhist literature than the Sutta-Nipāta, and no earlier corpus of primitive Buddhist doctrine than it contains.

While the presence of the Pāli on the opposite page forbids exuberance in translation, the limitations of metre (and I have sought to make the English follow roughly the Pāli scheme of versification) make it no easy matter—even without rhyme—to compress terse Pāli into a relatively modest compass in English. Ignoscent experti.

INTRODUCTION

THE Pāli Canon, as it has come down to us, is divided into three Piṭakas (or 'baskets'), viz.:

- Vinaya-p°,—containing the detailed Rule with which (in a simpler form) Gotama's bhikkhus (or 'Almsmen') began their corporate life.
- Sutta-p°,—containing (subsequent) discourses and dialogues, embodying doctrinal Buddhism.
- III. Abhidhamma-p°,—containing (still later) scholastic expositions of the Sutta-piţaka.

The Sutta-Nipāta, which is here translated, contains an ancient, probably the most ancient, part of the Sutta-piṭaka. It belongs to that portion of the Sutta-piṭaka which is named the Khuddaka Nikāya, or 'collection of short' treatises (as distinct from the four long Nikāyas,— called Dīgha, Majjhima, Saṃyutta, and Anguttara).

Of the five Vaggas (or 'books') of the present Sutta-Nipāta, the fifth stands out from its fellows by reason of its purposeful unity. While the Uraga, Mahā, Cūla, and Aṭṭhaka Vaggas consist each of a collection of independent and unconnected poems (sometimes interspersed with prose) called Suttas, the Pārāyana aims at a dramatic synthesis. Its prologue and epilogue serve as a setting to the sixteen Questions which elicit Gotama's gradual exposition of the saving 'Way Across',—an exposition which collectively is styled a homily (dhamma-pariyāya) in the prose preface to verse I124 (cf. v. I130) and is classified as simply a 'suttanta' (not a Vagga, or 'book' of many suttas) at Paramatthajotikā, II. 163.

Uncertainty still attaches to the sense in which the word 'Sutta' was used in primitive Buddhism. Originally meaning 'a thread', the word has come to denote prose narratives or dialogues concerning the dhamma, such as those which, in (e.g.) the Digha and Majjhima Nikāyas, characterize the great Sutta-Piṭaka,—in contradistinction to the contents of the Vinaya and Abhidhamma Piṭakas. But this was not the case from the outset. Thus, (a) in the Vinaya (II. 95), we find 'Sutta' specifically applied to the canonical Pātimokkha:—'Ubhayāni assa Pātimokkhāni vitthārena svāgatāni honti ... suttato anuvyañjanaso' ('to him have been handed down accurately and in full both Pātimokkhas, Sutta by Sutta and in extenso'). (b) At the end of the canonical Sutta Vibhanga's exposition of the Pātimokkha (Vin. IV. 351), there occur the words: 'Ettakam tassa Bhagavato sutta-gatam sutta-pariyāpannam anvad-dhamāsam uddesam āgacchati' ('thus much of the Lord's words, as handed down in Suttas and as embodied in Suttas, comes in course of recitation once a fortnight'). And (c) at Vinaya, II. 96–7 there is a condemnation of any 'dhamma-kathika', or professed reciter of the Dhamma (not of the Vinaya alone, it will incidentally be noted), who has failed to master not only the Pātimokkha Suttas but also the Sutta-Vibhanga commentary thereon ('tassa Suttam āgatam, no Sutta-vibhango'), or—a fortiori—'tassa n' eva Suttam āgatam no Sutta-vibhango').

While the foregoing quotations prove the use of the term 'Sutta' to include the disciplinary regulations of the young Community, I am not aware of the term being applied in the Canon to isolated apophthegms, which formed the kernel of Gotama's doctrinal teachings. It may well be, I suggest, that the title of 'Sutta' (primarily meaning 'thread' or 'string', cf. Sumangala Vilāsinī, I. 18) was reserved from the outset for any consecutive thread of argument or narration (whether of Rule or of Doctrine) continuously strung together and coherent.¹

II

The compilation of the Pāli Canon must have been spread over centuries, and have employed successive generations of ecclesiastical authors and editors before the present Ti-piṭaka was finally evolved. No credence can be extended to the orthodox Buddhist belief that the whole Pali Canon—at least in essentials—was settled in its present form at the First Council (which was held immediately after Gotama's death in (?) 483 B.C.). Originally, there were no 'scriptures', only memories of individual utterances by Gotama, and perhaps by his chief lieutenants,—memories like those which, some five and a half centuries later, formed the basic material of the Christian synoptics. Indeed, it cannot safely be assumed that, in its present form, any given 'book' of the Canon dates back to before Asoka's Council held at Patna in (perhaps) 240 B.C.

Composition of course preceded compilation; the date (if ascertainable) of the compilation of a canonical 'book' as a whole does not determine the date of composition of its constituents,—which latter may well be more ancient, in whole or part, than the synthetic book into which they have been incorporated.

I At Sumangala Viläsinī, I. 23, Buddhaghosa defines 'sutta' as denoting 'the two (Sutta-) Vibhangas, the Niddesa, the Khandhakas and Parivāra (of the Vinaya Piṭaka), the Mangala, Ratana, Nālaka, and Tuvaṭaka Suttas in the Sutta-Nipāta, together with all other utterances of the Tathāgata which are styled Suttas.'

He adds, that all those Suttas which contain both prose and verse are also classified as 'gevya'.

It will be noted, and is (I think) significant, that the list starts with the ancient Commentaries on (a) the Vinaya and (b) the Sutta-Nipāta's earliest elements. In support of the belief now generally accepted that the Pāli Canon was evolved from common material, there is the evidence afforded not only by the constant repetition throughout the great Nikāyas of 'stock passages' (which were as convenient for Eastern recitation as they are wearisome to a Western reader) but also by the frequent incorporation of the same composition, title and all, in more than one canonical book. To take a simple instance from the Sutta-Nipāta:—the Sela and Vāseṭṭha Suttas of our Mahā-vagga recur verbatim under the same titles in the Majjhima Nikāya. Also, the Metta Sutta of our Uraga Vagga, and the Ratana and (Mahā-) Mangala Suttas of our Cūla-vagga, reappear bodily in the canonical Khuddaka Pāṭha. Numerous also are the instances of individual stanzas of the Sutta-Nipāta recurring elsewhere in the Canon;—e.g. verses 45 and 46 are found also in the Majjhima Nikāya (III. 154), and in the Vinaya (I. 350), as well as in the Dhammapada (vv. 328–9).

A special light, however, is thrown on the evolution of our Sutta-Nipāta by the inclusion in the Canon of its ancient commentary, called Niddesa (or 'exposition'). Now, this canonical Niddesa is a commentary not on the whole of our 'Sutta-Nipāta' (which it does not name as such) but only on its concluding Vaggas (Aṭṭhaka and Pārāyana) and on the Khaggavisāṇa (or 'thinoceros') Sutta of the Uraga Vagga. The canonical Niddesa, therefore, leaves untouched (i) the whole of the Mahā and Cūla Vaggas, and (ii) eleven out of twelve Suttas of the Uraga Vagga; i.e. it wholly ignores the Sutta-Nipāta's corporate title and two-thirds of its existing contents.

But the Canonical Niddesa is not the sole external authority for the relative age of our Sutta-Nipāta. Further direct (and corroborative) evidence is furnished by the following references to our Sutta-Nipāta in other canonical books, such as the Vinaya and the Saṁyutta and Anguttara Nikāyas,—references, it will be observed, which are specifically restricted to those two Vaggas with which the Niddesa deals. Thus:

- (i) Sn. 844 is quoted at Samyutta Nikāya, III. 9 and 12:—Vuttam idam Bhagavatā Aṭṭhaka-vaggike Māgandiya-pañhe: 'Okam pahāya . . . kayirā ti'.
- (ii) Sn. 1038 is quoted at Samyutta Nikāya, II. 47:—Vuttam idam Pārā-yane Ajita-pañhe: 'Ye ca . . . mārisâti'.
- (iii) Sn. 1042 is quoted at Anguttara Nikāya, III. 399:—Vuttam idam Bhagavatā Pārāyane Metteyya-pañhe: 'Yo ubh' ante . . . accagā ti'.
- (iv) Sn. 1048 is quoted at Anguttara Nikāya, I. 133 and II. 45:—Idañ ca pana me tam sandhāya bhāsitam Pārāyane Punnaka-pañhe: 'Sam-khāya... brūmīti'.
- (v) Sn. 1106-7 is quoted at Anguttara Nikāya, I. 134:—Idañ ca pana me tam sandhāya bhāsitam Pārāyane Udaya-pañhe: 'Pahānam' . . . pabhedanam'.
 - b [H.O.S. 37]

(vi) At Vinaya, I. 1961, Sona, being asked by Gotama to show what he knew of the Dhamma, recited the whole contents of the Atthaka Vagga: —Sabbān' eva Atthaka-vaggikāni sarena abhāsi.

Hence it may be concluded that, at the date of its composition, the existing Niddesa covered as a commentary the whole of the then existing 'Sutta-Nipāta'; and that, after the composition of the Niddesa commentary, but before the Pāli Canon was fixed, further material was incorporated with the Pārāyana, the Aṭṭhaka Vagga, and the Khaggavisāna Sutta to make up the final Sutta-Nipāta as it has come down to us in the Canon. Thus the Pārāyana, the Aṭṭhaka Vagga, and the Khaggavisāna are older, as a compilation, not only than the canonical Niddesa which comments on them, but also than (those portions of) the Vinaya and of the two Nikāyas which specifically cite them.

III

But, as has been noted supra, authorship precedes editorial compilation; and the ascertained stages of growth of a compiled 'book' by no means settle the relative date of composition of its contents, a question for the solution of which internal evidence must be invoked, for what it is worth.

Internal evidence may be linguistic, metrical, or doctrinal.

Mainly on linguistic grounds, Fausböll (in his Introduction to his translation of the Sutta-Nipāta in vol. x of the Sacred Books of the East) originally considered 'the greater part of the Mahāvagga and nearly the whole of the Atṭhaka-vagga' as very old', arriving at this conclusion from two reasons, first from the language, and secondly from the contents (the latter perhaps not on sufficient grounds). As regards language, 'we not only find here (he said in 1880) what we meet with in other Pāli poetry, the fuller Vedic forms of nouns and verbs in the plural . . . but also unusual (sometimes old) forms² and words. . . Sometimes we meet also with difficult and irregular constructions, and very condensed expressions. All this (he urged) proves, I think, that these parts of the book are much older than the Suttas in which the language is not only fluent, but of which some verses are even singularly melodious.

In 1885, however, in the preface to his editio princeps of the Pāli text of the Sutta-Nipāta, Fausböll modified the foregoing view,—solely on external

In the Pāli Text Society's Journal for 1896, and in the Journal Asiatique for May 1915, will be found important articles by the late Professor Rhys Davids and by M. Sylvain Lévi, respectively, in which the Sona episode is traced beyond the Pāli Canon into Buddhist Sanskrit, Chinese, and Thibetan. A common error of these later translations is the confusion of attha (= eight) with attha (= welfare).

evidence. 'I ought (he said in 1885) to have added' (sc. to the Mahā and Aṭṭhaka Vaggas) 'the Pārāyana Vagga. That my then (1880) expressed opinion holds good about the two last-mentioned at least' (sc. the Aṭṭhaka Vagga and the Pārāyana), seems to me to be evident from there being a commentary on them, called Niddesa, which has been incorporated in the Buddhist canon and from their having been quoted' (as Trenckner had pointed out) 'in the Nikāyas and in the Vinaya-pitaka'.

This frank shifting of linguistic judgement in deference to non-linguistic evidence tends to support Max Müller's general opinion (in his 1880 Introduction to the Dhammapada at p. xix of vol. x of the S.B.E.):—'Nor is the language, whether Sanskrit or Pāli, a safe guide for fixing dates. . . . This branch of critical scholarship requires to be cultivated far more extensively and accurately before true scholars would venture to fix the date of a Sanskrit or Pāli text on the strength of linguistic evidence alone.'

To pass from language to metre, anustubh ślokas-represented in my translation by blank verse of five accents-constitute a relatively easy metre and thus would naturally be employed, in later recensions, to pad out old tristubh material, which is metrically more difficult to write. Take for example the Atthaka Vagga, or 'Book of the Octads',-so called because in four of its initial Suttas (Nos. 2-5) there are eight stanzas. Though these four eponymous Suttas are all tristubh 'octads', they are now preceded by a Kāma Sutta of only six stanzas, in anuştubh ślokas, which manifestly forms a late preface to the 'Atthaka' Vagga as a re-edited whole. So, too, in the Sāriputta Sutta (No. 16) of the same Vagga, the equally edifying ślokas, Nos. 955-62, suggest an editorial preamble to the vigorous tristubhs with which the Atthaka Vagga ends. In the Mahavagga also, the tristubh verse No. 728 persists in the Dyayatānupassanā Sutta as an oasis amid scholastic accretions. So, also, the Pārāyana now consists, as regards nearly three quarters of its contents, of mixed prose and anustubh ślokas, which together form as it were a matrix in which are imbedded tristubhs obviously earlier than the interstitial matter surrounding them.

Instances might be multiplied to support the working hypothesis which I venture to advance for the Sutta-Nipāta, that, while all its prose is late, the longer the metrical line the later is the composition likely to have been. It would, however, be straining this working hypothesis unduly to argue that, though in the Pāli Canon triṣṭubhs are most probably ancient, therefore all anuṣṭubh ślokas are necessarily, and in all cases, of late date; for both metres go back to the Rg-veda.²

- ¹ The Uraga Vagga is named after its initial Uraga Sutta.
- ² Charpentier has shown (Die Supamasage, p. 204 et seqq.) that the tristubh is normally used for dialogue in the Vedic hymns and in early narrative poetry, including the Jätaka.

The Pārāyana, which perhaps contains the oldest material in the Sutta-Nipāta and is quoted by name four times in the Nikāyas, calls for special comment. Although the Pārāyana now forms a literary unity, it is made up of divers materials, new and old. Evidently new is:

- (a) the not wholly relevant prologue, dealing with the curse on Bāvarī (?=Babylonian), and
- (b) the epilogue,—except the tristubhs (vv. 1133-4 and 1142-6) which would seem to have been originally a sequel to Pingiya's Question and to have been amplified subsequently so as to round off the composite Pārāyana.

As regards its sixteen 'Questions', each is in form a separate dialogue dealing with a separate element of Buddhist doctrine; but not all suggest one and the same date of composition. If, tentatively, a metrical test be applied, the tristubhs of the five Questions 3 to 7 (Punnaka's to Nanda's), and of the three Questions 9, 11, and 12 (Todeyya's, Jatukanni's, and Bhadrāvudha's), would rank as the earlier elements (and, personally, I think such a conclusion probable),—the remaining 'Questions' having been inserted later, when the earliest matter was being supplemented.

Further, there is the direct historical evidence of Asoka's Bhābrū (or Second Bairāt) Rock Edict, which Vincent Smith (Asoka, 3rd edition, 1920) would date from Asoka's 13th regnal year, i.e. 257 B.C. As this early Edict cites among seven passages from the Canon at least three from the Sutta-Nipāta (viz. the Muni-sutta (I. 12), the Nālaka-sutta (III. 11), and the Sāriputta-sutta (IV. 16)), there is thus historical evidence for the existence of these Sutta-Nipāta texts before the Patna Council (? 240 B.C.)

The conclusions indicated by the foregoing observations may be summarized as follows:

- (i) The Pārāyana, the Aṭṭhaka Vagga, and the Khaggavisāna Sutta are the earliest elements of our present canonical Sutta-Nipāta.
- (ii) These earliest elements preceded in date not only their canonical commentary (the Niddesa) but also those portions (at least) of the Vinaya and of the Samyutta and Anguttara Nikāyas which specifically quote them.
- (iii) The date of compilation by Vaggas, which is later than the date of composition of Suttas, does not necessarily fix the date either of original composition, or of later transformations, of Suttas.
- (iv) Metrically, tristubhs suggest the oldest (as prose suggests the latest) elements of our Sutta-Nipāta which, as a composite whole, cannot be dated with any certainty earlier than the final compilation of the Canon.

IV

In accord with the foregoing, internal, linguistic and metrical conclusions, are the following considerations—the first based on the primitive connotation of the word 'buddha', and the second on the unvarnished presentment in the Sutta-Nipāta of events which later on were overlaid by the exuberance of Oriental fantasy.

- (i) Whilst the title of 'Sambuddha' (or more fully: 'Bhagavā Araham Sammā-sambuddho') is restricted to him whom we call 'the Buddha' (or to his apocryphal seven—later twenty-five—forerunners of other zons), and whilst the uncompounded form 'buddha' throughout the Canon usually has the same denotation, there are in the Sutta-Nipāta some half-dozen instances of its use in a more extended sense so as to embrace 'catusacca-buddhā ariyapuggalā' (Pj. II. 374), i.e. 'the Noble ones who are alive to the Four Truths' of Buddhism. These instances of the plural use of buddhā in the Sutta-Nipāta occur, it will be found, in triṣtubh stanzas, indicated above as the oldest material of this book; and it seems a priori probable that what was in Buddhism at first a title open to all bhikkhus of highest 'comprehension' or 'enlightenment' (cf. verse 386 d.), came later to be confined to the Founder alone.
- (ii) As against the lavish marvels and wonders which, even in canonical writings (e.g. Majjhima Nikāya, Sutta No. 123), embroider the accounts of Gotama's birth and departure from home, it is with a sense of relief that in the Sutta-Nipāta we find an absence of Nativity prodigies and (in the first two Suttas of the Mahāvagga) a wholesome austerity in the primitive record of his renunciation and of his ascetic quest of Peace. In the Sutta-Nipāta he is simply a well-born Sakyan who left house and home for the higher life and nearly starved himself to death by the implacable rigours of his self-mortifications.
- (iii) Notable, too, is the absence from the Sutta-Nipāta of any mention of bhikkhunīs, or Almswomen, in connexion with the Buddhist samgha or community. It may be that this silence (if not, indeed, accidental) reveals a primitive stage in which there existed Almsmen without Almswomen,—a stage earlier than the accepted account of Gotama's (eventual) admission of women to his community at the instance of his aunt, Mahā-pajāpatī. At all events the Sutta-Nipāta restricts itself to Almsmen alone.
- (iv) In the Royal Asiatic Society's Journal for 1898 I advanced the view that the title of 'Tathāgata' indicated one who had won through to the truth (tatha). I point out here that this title—given in v. 236 (as usually) to the Buddha—is, in vv. 237–8, extended (in identical terms) to the dhamma and to the samgha. This extension of the title from Gotama to the Doctrine and to the Community excludes from the connotation of tathāgata (as thus extended) those fanciful explanations¹ of Gotama's own career which turn on tathā (=thus), as indicating that Gotama personally followed the exact example, and reproduced the experience, of earlier Buddhas in attaining Buddhahood. As applied here to all three members of the Buddhist Triad alike, tathāgata cannot be restricted in meaning to Gotama's own mental processes and their evolution. These specific processes in time and space, whilst historically untrue of his (subsequent) Community, can have no place in the abstract philosophy of his final Doctrine. The only interpretation of 'tathāgata' which will apply here to dhamma and samgha, as well as to the Buddha himself, must be abstract in its nature and not lie in the phenomenal realm of historical sequences. Such an interpretation I find only in deriving the word from tatha (=true) and in rendering it in all the three cases alike as 'bringing the Truth'.

But I recognize that the author of vv.236-8 of the Sutta-Nipāta, in applying the title to dhamma and saṃgha, as well as to 'the Buddha', may simply have failed to understand its meaning.

I close this Introduction by adducing two parallels—if, indeed, they are not ultimately one—between Buddhism and Christianity. I premise in advance that there is here no question of one creed borrowing from the other; the relationship goes deeper than that. (In his Ecclesiastical Polity, Richard Hooker has affirmed a moral law of divine origin, which is not enshrined in the Bible but is deducible from other sources and derives its sanction from man's rational faculties.)

A. The first of these two parallels relates to what Jeremy Taylor would term 'holy living'. From (e.g.) a 1927 lecture on Ireland and Mediaeval Europe (Proc. Brit. Acad. vol. xiii) I quote a Franciscan Exhortation to the clergy of the fifteenth century:

'Be not quick to anger, or loud of voice or covetous. Eat not to fulness, be neither niggard nor liar. Delight not in food. Thy side half-bare, half-cold thy bed . . . knowledge, steadfastness, persistence. Silence, humility, chastity, patience. Take not the world's way.'

It would not be difficult to match from the Buddhist scriptures each individual clause and word of this succinct passage, though it would involve citations from several books, and the elimination of otiose matter. For e.g. Sumangala Vilāsini, I. 50, et seog.

brevity's sake I confine myself here to citing from the Sutta-Nipāta the following stanzas of the Mahāmangala Sutta, infra (II. 4):

- "Tis rev'rent awe, content, prompt gratitude, and due attendance when the Doctrine's preached;
- 'tis patience, courtesy, the company of Almsmen, timely talks on gospel truth;
- 10. 'tis strict austerity, a holy life,-

'These', observed Gotama (see p. 12 of the first volume of the Dīgha Nikāya), 'are the trifling matters, the minor details, of mere morality.' And so too in the Christian scheme these stages do not rank higher than the 'remote preparation by purgation'. 'Holiness before Peace' was the dictum of Hurrell Froude,—see Brilioth's Anglican Revival.

- B. In higher realms than such downous or 'training', Saint Augustine's 'proximate preparation' for Contemplation $(\theta \epsilon \omega \rho l a)$ finds its parallel, I suggest, in the $jh\bar{a}na$ of Buddhism. In the ancient Sutta-Nipāta, $jh\bar{a}na$ ('reverie' or 'meditation') is used in the singular only; in the Nikāyas generally, it has come to be subdivided (e.g. in the 4th Sutta of the Majjhima Nikāya) into the following four stages for eliminating mental process:
- r. 'Strenuous effort (says Gotama of himself) won for me perseverance that never flagged; there arose in me mindfulness that knew no distraction, perfect tranquillity of body, steadfastness of mind that never wavered.

'Divested of pleasures of sense, divested of wrong states of consciousness, I entered on, and abode in, the First Jhāna with all its zest and satisfaction—a state bred of inward aloofness but not divorced from observation and reflection.

- 2. 'As I rose above observation and reflection, I entered on, and abode in, the Second Jhāna with all its zest and satisfaction—a state bred of rapt concentration, above all observation and reflection, a state whereby the heart is focused and tranquillity reigns within.
- 3. 'By shedding the emotion of zest, I entered on, and abode in, the Third Jhāna, with its poised equanimity—mindful and self-possessed, feeling in my frame the satisfaction of which the Noble say that poise and mindfulness bring abiding satisfaction.
- 4. 'By putting from me both satisfaction and dissatisfaction, and by shedding the joys and sorrows I used to feel, I entered on, and abode in, the Fourth Jhāna—the state that, knowing neither satisfaction nor dissatisfaction, is the consummate purity of poised equanimity and mindfulness.'

Gotama's four stages lead up to a heart and mind 'steadfast, clarified and purified, clean and cleansed of things impure, tempered and apt for service, stablished and immutable', i.e. to a perfectly tempered instrument for intellectual conquests to be achieved therewith and thereafter.

From Gotama I pass to Augustine of Hippo a thousand years later,—restricting myself here too to the latter's autobiographical records, as marshalled with authority by Dom Cuthbert Butler in his Western Mysticism. The Confessions, observes the learned Abbot of Downside, are 'the portrayal of an emergence from intellectual error and from moral disorder' by a process 'for the most part intellectual in idea and in language, sometimes being frankly Plotinian'. 'Western mystics (he adds) commonly represent Contemplation' (the older term for mysticism, restored by Dom Cuthbert Butler) 'as attained to by and in absorption in prayer; but for Augustine it seems to have been primarily an intellectual process—informed, indeed, by intense religious warmth, but still primarily intellectual'.

It is after and beyond the remote preparation by purgation' that the Christian aspirant proceeds to the Augustinian counterpart of the Buddhist Jhānas, viz. the proximate preparation for Contemplation by the processes called 'Recollection' and 'Introversion'. Here 'Recollection' is taken in its primary sense of gathering together and concentrating the mind; it consists—and this is the essential link with the jhānas—first in the effort to banish from the mind all images and thoughts of external things, all sense-perceptions and thoughts of 'creatures'; then the reasoning processes of the intellect are silenced, and by this exercise of abstraction a solitude is produced wherein the soul may operate in its most spiritual faculties. This shutting off of all internal things from the mind, and emptying it of distracting thoughts, which is the object of 'Recollection', is the prelude to that entering of the mind into itself that is effected by 'Introversion', which is a concentration of the mind on its own highest or deepest part.

With ultimate outlook we are not here concerned. We are not concerned with Gotama's claim to be able both to recall his own previous existences and to foretell the future lot of his fellow creatures; nor on the other hand are we concerned with St. Augustine's claim to have seen God in ictu trepidantis aspectus. Our sole concern here is not with the vision of a Promised Land but only with the climb up Pisgah's slopes by stages so similar as to approximate to identity.

Sutta 1. Shakes
As snakes slough outworn skins, an Almsman sheds belief in this or after- worlds, —who curbs his wrath (as herbs quell vipers' poisoned bite);	[1]
—who passion extirpates, (as divers by the root pluck out the lotus plant);	[2]
—who cravings extirpates by drying up their flow;	[3]
who sweeps away conceit, as floods a bridge of reeds;	[4]
—who looks for bliss in lives to come, as little as for flow'rs on fig-tree boughs;	[5]

—who hurries not nor lags, because he knows this world 'has no reality';	[9]
—who hurries not nor lags, being from wants now freed, because the world around 'has no reality';	[10]

Dhaniya:	A staunch and loyal dame have I, by many years of comradeship endeared, of whom I hear naught wrong. —So, an the heavens will, the storm may burst amain.	[22]
The Lord:	A staunch, enfranchised heart have I, by many years of discipline subdued; in me naught wrong persists. —So, an the heavens will, the storm may burst amain.	[23]

Dhaniya:	Both cows and sucking calves have I, with cows in calf and heifers ripe to breed, and o'er my kine a bull. —So, an the heavens will, the storm may burst amain.	[26]
The Lord:	No cows nor sucking calves have I, no cows in calf, no heifers ripe to breed, nor bull to rule my kine. —So, an the heavens will, the storm may burst amain.	[27]
Dhaniya:	Stout pales surround my byres; new ropes secure my kine; not e'en a calf gets through. —So, an the heavens will, the storm may burst amain.	[28]
The Lord:	Breaking my Bonds in twain, —with strength as of a bull, or elephant that snaps a creeper—nevermore shall I conception know! —So, an the heavens will, the storm may burst amain.	[29]
	Here, flooding hill and dale, down poured the rain; and, as he heard it, Dhaniya thus hailed these happenings:—	[30]

Sutta 4. Bharadvaja, the Franklin

Thus have I heard. Once the Lord was living among the Magadha folk at Dakkhiṇā-giri in the brahmin village of Eka-Nāļā, at a time when the brahmin Kasi-Bhāradvāja's five hundred ploughs were harnessed for the sowing. In the morning early, duly robed and bowl in hand, the Lord went to where the brahmin was busy, at an hour when a meal was forward; and stood there to one side. Observing him standing there for alms, the brahmin said:—Before I eat, I plough and sow, anchorite; and you too should plough and sow before you eat.

Aham pi kho, brāhmaņa, kasāmi ca vapāmi ca, kasitvā ca vapitvā ca bhuñjāmîti.

Na kho pana mayam passāma bhoto Gotamassa yugam vā nangalam vā phālam vā pācanam vā balivadde vā; atha ca pana bhavam Gotamo evam āha: Aham pi kho, brāhmaṇa, kasāmi ca vapāmi ca, kasitvā ca vapitvā ca bhuñjāmîti. Atha kho Kasibhāradvājo brāhmaṇo Bhagavantam gāthāya ajjhabhāsi:

- Kassako paţijānāsi, na ca passāma te kasim. [76]

 - Saddhā bījam, tapo vuṭṭhi, paññā me yuganangalam, hirī īsā, mano yottam, sati me phālapācanam.

 - Evam esä kasī kaṭṭhā; sā hoti amatapphalā; [80] etam kasim kasitvāna sabbadukkhā pamuccatîti.

Atha kho Kasibhāradvājo brāhmaņo mahatiyā kamsapātiyā pāyāsam vaḍḍhetvā Bhagavato upanāmesi: Bhuñjatu bhavam Gotamo pāyāsam, kassako bhavam, yam hi bhavam Gotamo amatapphalam kasim kasatîti

- 7. Aññena ca kevalinam mahesim [82] khīṇāsavam kukkucavūpasantam annena pānena upaṭṭhahassu; khettam hi tam puññapekhassa hotîti.

We fail, however, to see the worthy Gotama's yoke, or plough, or ploughshare, or goad, or ox-team,—albeit he asserts that he ploughs and sows before he eats.

Thereupon, the brahmin addressed the Lord in this stanza:

You claim to be a tiller, though we see [76] none of your tillage. Tell us how you till; for of your tilling we would fain hear more.

The Lord: My seed is faith; austerity of life my rain; wisdom my yoke and plough; my pole is fear to err,—with thought to strap the yoke, and mindfulness for ploughshare and the goad.

Watchful o'er word and deed, and temperate in diet, I make insight weed my crop, nor rest till final bliss is harvested.

Effort is my stout ox, which turns not back at headlands;—straight to Peace he bears me on, to that last bourne where anguish is no more.

Thus have I tilled, with Deathlessness for crop. [80] And whose tills as I, is freed from Ills.

Hereon, the brahmin served up milk-rice on a great bronze dish and offered it to the Lord, saying—Eat this, Gotama; a tiller indeed art thou, in that thou tillest a crop that is Deathless.

The Lord: I take no chanter's fee.
—Seers countenance it not;

th' Enlighten'd scout such fees; and while this Doctrine lasts, this practice must hold good.

Provide with other fare a sage of holy calm, consummate, Cankerless; merit to reap,—sow there.

To whom then am I to give this, Gotama?

Brahmin, in the whole wide world of gods, Māras, and Brahmās, I see no one among anchorites and brahmins, gods and men, who could digest this food except a Truth-finder or the disciple of a Truth-finder. So either throw it away where little grass grows, or else fling it into water where there are no living creatures.

Thereupon, into water where there were no living creatures the brahmin flung that milk-rice,—which hissed and sputtered, smoked and steamed, just like a ploughshare that has lain broiling in the sun.

Aghast, and with every hair on his body standing erect, the brahmin went over to the Lord, and, bowing his head at the Lord's feet, cried: - Wonderful, Gotama; quite wonderful! Just as a man might set upright again what had fallen down, or reveal what had been hidden away, or tell a man who had gone astray which was his way, or bring a lamp into darkness so that those with eyes to see might see the things about them, -even so, in many ways has Gotama made his Doctrine clear! To the reverend Gotama I come for refuge and to his Doctrine and to his Community. Be it mine to receive admission and confirmation at the hands of the Lord! So the brahmin Kasi-Bhāradvāja was admitted and confirmed as an almsman of the Lord. Nor was it long after his confirmation before the Reverend Bharadvaja, dwelling alone and aloof, strenuous, ardent and purged of self, won after no great time that prize in quest of which young men go forth from home to homelessness as Pilgrims, that prize of prizes which crowns the higher life,—even this did he think out for himself, realize and attain, and in this did he dwell here and now, convinced that for him rebirth was no more, that he had lived the highest life, that his task was done, and that now there was no more left of what he had been. So the Reverend Bhāradvāja was numbered among the Arahats.

		'Way-farer' ranks as third. The Path, in texts revealed, he treads in temperance, in mindfulness, in zeal, and blamelessness of life.	[88]

Sutta 7. The Wastrel

Thus have I heard. Once while the Lord was staying in Sāvatthī in Jeta's grove in Anāthapindika's pleasaunce, early one morning, duly robed and bowl in hand, he went into the city for alms, at an hour when there was the sacrificial fire lighted in the dwelling of the brahmin Aggika-Bhāradvāja; and the oblation was elevated. In the course of his house-to-house visitations, the Lord approached the brahmin's dwelling, but was seen some way off by the brahmin, who shouted:—Stop where you are, shaveling! Stop where you are, you wretched anchorite! Stop where you are, wastrel!

Said the Lord to the brahmin:—Do you understand, brahmin, what a 'wastrel' is, or what outlooks make a 'wastrel'?

No, replied the brahmin, I do not understand what a 'wastrel' is or what outlooks make a 'wastrel'. Be so good, Gotama, as to explain it, for my information.

Give ear then, brahmin, and pay attention; I will speak. Certainly, said the brahmin in assent.

The Lord be	egan:—
	Be he as 'wastrel' known, who harbours ire and rancour, slander, error, and deceit.	[116]
	The wastrel's he who injures living things (or beast or bird), and pities naught that lives.	[117]
	The wastrel harries and beleaguers folk in town and village,—where he 's called a scourge.	[118]
	The wastrel steals, in village or the waste, whate'er he covets of another's goods.	[119]
	The wastrel, pressed to pay up what he owes, denies a debt is owing and absconds.	[120]
	The wastrel, coveting some trifle, slays a peaceful trav'ller for that trifle's sake.	[121]
	The wastrel bears false witness in a suit, to help himself or others, or for cash.	[122]
	By force, or with consent, the wastrel holds commerce with wives of kinsmen or of friends.	[123]
	The wastrel's he who, well-to-do himself, supports not aged parents, past their prime.	[124]
	The wastrel strikes, and goads with taunts, his sire, his mother, brother, sister, mother-in-law.	[125]
	The wastrel, asked for counsel, counsels wrong and clokes pronouncements in obscurities.	[126]
	The wastrel hopes his villainies will not be known as his, and privily proceeds.	[127]
	The wastrel gladly shares another's feast, but, when his host calls, offers no return.	[128]
	The wastrel's he who brahmins guides astray, or anchorites, or other travellers.	[129]
	At dinner-time, the wastrel greets with jeers—not alms—a brahmin or an anchorite.	[130]
	The wastrel, greedy for a penny fee, tells fortunes,—in abysmal ignorance.	[131]

Debased by overweening arrogance, the wastrel lauds himself, runs others down.

F. 133]	Book 1, Sutta 7. The Wastrel	35
	The wastrel fosters strife, is miserly, evil of aspirations, stingy, sly, devoid of conscience, and unscrupulous.	[±33]
	The wastrel's tongue defames th' Enlighten'd One, or His disciples, mendicant or lay.	[134]
	Th' unsaintly wastrel, claiming saint to be, is master-thief of all the universe, and vilest wastrel of the wastrel crowd. —All these are wastrels whom I have portrayed.	[±35]
	No birth a wastrel—or a Brahmin—makes; 'tis conduct wastrels makes,—and Brahmins too.	[136]
	And here's an illustration proves my case:— Low, dog-devouring outcastes had a son	[137]
	—Mātanga named—whose fame preëminent drew crowds of brahmins and nobility.
	Upborne in heaven's chariot, he soared, from passion purged, along the spotless path till bliss was won; nor did his lowly birth deny him entry into paradise!
	But there are brahmins born, in runes profound, whose evil lives proclaim them what they are,
	whom men on earth condemn, whom doom awaits; nor does their brahmin birth forbid, or bar, their condemnation here, or future doom.	[141]

Hereupon, the brahmin Aggika-Bhāradvāja said to the Lord:—Wonderful, Gotama; quite wonderful! Just as a man might set upright again what had been cast down, and reveal what had been hidden away, or tell a man who had gone astray which was his way, or bring a lamp into darkness so that those with eyes to see might see the things about them,—even so, in many ways, has Gotama made his Doctrine clear. To the reverend Gotama I come as my refuge, and to his Doctrine, and to his Community. I ask him to accept me as a follower who has found an abiding refuge from this day forth while life lasts.

No birth a wastrel-or a Brahmin-makes;

'tis conduct wastrels makes,-and Brahmins too.

Sutta 8. Goodwill

When Peace is won, th' adept in welfare needs to prove an able, upright man, of gracious speech, kind mood, devoid of arrogance.

an easy, grateful, guest,
—no busybody; wants but few; sense-disciplined, quick-witted, bluster-free, never importunate;

and let him never stoop to conduct mean or low, evoking grave rebuke. May creatures all abound in weal and peace; may all be blessed with peace always; all creatures weak or strong, all creatures great and small; creatures unseen or seen, dwelling afar or near, born or awaiting birth, —may all be blessed with peace!

Let none cajole or flout his fellows anywhere; let none wish others harm in dudgeon or in hate.

Sutta 9. The Himalayan Sprite

Sātāgira: It's mid-month sabbath, and a lovely night; —to peerless Gotama let us repair.

Hemavata: Has he his thoughts in full control? Does such control of thoughts extend to all that lives?

Come fair or foul, can he control his mind?

Sātāgira: He keeps his thoughts in full control, and this control of thoughts extends to all that lives.

Come fair or foul, he still controls his mind.

Ilemavata: Leaves he untouched what is not given him?
Keeps he his hands from harming living things?
Is he remiss in zeal or reverie?

Sātāgira: He leaves untouched what is not given him; he keeps his hands from harm to living things; he knows no sloth; he cleaves to reverie. [154]

	Tell me; do falsehoods ever cross his lips? Is he harsh-spoken or calumnious? Or does his speech bewray frivolity?	·

Hemavata:	Is he unstained by sensuous delights? Keeps he a heart unmarred? Has he o'ercome illusion? Has his eye all outlooks gauged?	[160]

Sātāgira:	Yes, he has lore, and walks in purity; Cankers are dead; he'll ne'er be born again.

	How came the world to be? Whereby gets it relation? What gives it support? Say, what assails the world? What brings it low?	[168]
The Lord:	From six things springs the world, and six give it relation; six give it support; six bring the world to final overthrow.
Hemavata:	What's this support? What overthrows the world? Expound Release, and how to end all Ills.	[170]

Sutta 10. The Woodland Sprite

Thus have I heard. Once the Lord was staying at Alavi in the domain of the Woodland Sprite Alavaka, who came to the Lord saying:—Come out, anchorite!

Yes, sir, replied the Lord, as out he came. Get in again, anchorite, said the Sprite.

Yes, sir, replied the Lord, as in he went.

A second and a third time the same thing happened. But when the Sprite ordered the Lord out for the fourth time, the Lord replied:—No, I will not come out for you, sir. Do what you please.

I will ask you a question, anchorite. If you don't answer me, I will scare you out of your wits, or rive your heart, or fling you by the heels across the Ganges.

Sir, in all the wide world of gods, Māras, and Brahmās, I see no one among anchorites and brahmins, gods or men, who could do to me what you suggest. However, sir, ask what you will.

Hereon, the Sprite Alavaka addressed the Lord in these stanzas:-

What forms a man's chief wealth? What leads men on to weal? What taste excels the rest? What life is deemed the best?

The Lord: Faith forms a man's chief wealth; [182] the Doctrine leads to weal; the sweetest taste is truth; a life of wisdom's best.

the sweetest taste is truth;
a life of wisdom's best.

Alavaka: How cross the Surge? How cross the raging Flood?
How shed besetting Ills? How cleanse the heart?

The Lord: The Surge is crossed by faith, the Flood by zeal;

Effort sheds Ills; and Insight cleanses hearts.

Alavaka:	How's Insight gained? And how are Riches found? How comes renown? What knits affection's ties? How, after life on earth, shall sorrow cease?	[185]
The Lord:	Insight is gained by trust that Arahats hold saving doctrine; next, by diligent and close attention to their homilies;	[186]
	he Riches finds whose life is in the right, who bears his yoke with strenuous resolve. Through truth there comes renown; affection's ties are knit by ready generosity.	[187]

and evermore from its nine apertures nine several excretions issue forth,	[197]
as eyes and ears, with nostrils, mouth, and skin, exude abroad their foul discharge of filth,	[198]
and brains fill up the hollow cranium. —'A fine thing this!' say fools, by error led.	[199]
But, when the livid bloated corpse is flung out on the charnel-ground, his kin heed not,	[200]
while jackals, dogs, wolves, vultures, crows, and worms, with other living things, devour his flesh.	[201]
But th' Almsman, here in Buddha's teaching versed, —he knows the body, sees its nature clear.	[202]
So let the thought—'this corpse was once as you, and is as you will some day be', dispel pride in the body from your heart and mind.	[203]
For when such pride and passion pass away, the Almsman, here in Buddha's teaching versed, wins Deathless peace, Nirvāna's changeless state.	[204]
This noisome, two-legged body man parades, —though inly putrid, though discharging filth.	[205]
What is 't but blindness, for that body's sake, to plume one's self or sneer at other men?	[206]
Sutta 12. The Sage
From close association perils spring; a home degrades. Clear-eyed, the sage concludes to have no home, and no associates.	[207]

Weigh causes; kill off germs, before affection grows. Proof then against rebirth, the sage is lost to ken.	[209]

	Alive to errors all, a prey to none, the Sage harbours no want, wants naught; —across the Flood is he.	[210]
	The wise acclaim as 'Sage' a conqueror all-wise, flawless of thought, without one tie or craving, Freed;	[211]
	—the thinker wise and good, thought's watchful votary, released from ties, and quit of crassness, Canker-free;	[212]
	—the Sage who walks aloof, unmoved by praise or blame, whom (lion-like) no sounds dismay, whom (like the wind) no nets enmesh, who (like the lotus) sheds whate'er would tarnish him;—the guide of others, led by none;	[213]
	—tranquil, sense-disciplined, still imperturbable (no matter what men say) as is a timber-balk;	[214]
	—who loathes depravity, as, shuttle-wise, he moves onward 'twixt right and wrong,	[215]
	—the Sage, by self-restraint through youth and manhood kept from wrong, who angers none nor ever anger feels;
	—who, careless if his dole from top or bottom comes, carps not at what he gets, nor meagre thanks returns;

II. THE SHORT BOOK

Sutta 1. The Three Gems

May denizens of earth and sky assembled here, may beings all, rejoice and hearken unto me.

List, beings all, and show goodwill to men, who bring oblations night and day. So shield mankind from harm.

No wealth in earth or skies, no gem divine, can vie with Him who found the Truth. This gem the Buddha holds; —and may that truth bless all!

—our Sage's Deathless Peace—can find no match elsewhere.
This gem the Doctrine holds;
—and may that truth bless all!

'Rapt contemplation's meed', which matchless Buddha praised, can find no match elsewhere. This gem the Doctrine holds; —and may that truth bless all!

His faithful followers,
Conversion's eightfold ranks (four Paths, four Fruits, in all), deserve oblations; gifts to them yield rich returns.
This gem the Order holds;
—and may that truth bless all!

	Though you (a brahmin!) say you touch no carrion, you eat choice dishes made with flesh of birds.—I ask what you term 'carrion'.	[241]
Kassapa (a former Buddha	Killing and maiming, stripes,): bonds, theft, lies, fraud, deceit, adultery,—not meats, but these, are carrion.	[242]
	Pursuit of pleasure, lust for guzzling, life unclean, blatant dissent,—not meats, but these, are carrion.	[243]
	Backbiting, cruelty, betrayals, ruthless pride, mean stinginess,—not meats, but these, are carrion.	[244]
	Anger, conceit, revolt, guile, envy, bluster, pride, low company,—not meats, but these, are carrion.
	Base living, slander, fraud, cheating, the trickster's wiles, foul infamies,—not meats, but these, are carrion.	[246]
	The lust to kill and hurt and rob, the evil trade of hunters fierce,—not meats, but these, are carrion.
	This rage to slay and steal, these crimes, are fraught with doom and end in hell;—not meats, but these, are carrion.	[248]

2. Ananvayam piyam vācam yo mittesu pakubbati,

No abstinence from meat and fish, no nudity, no top-knots, shaven crowns, no grime or garb of pelt, no cult of sacred fire, no stark austerities to purchase future bliss, no runes, burnt-off'rings, rites,—can cleanse the man who doubts, Control thy senses, rule thy powers, hold to Truth, be kind. The saint who leaves all ties and vanquishes all Ills, is stained by naught he either sees or hears.

What thus the Lord set forth, the brahmin realized, as, verse by verse, he heard th' unswerving mystic Sage, all 'carrion' above.

Hearing the Buddha preach these lofty, saving truths, denouncing 'carrion' and sweeping Ills away, the brahmin meekly knelt and asked to be enrolled an Almsman then and there.

Sutta 3. Loyalty

When glozing protestations end in naught, then sage observers style it 'words, not deeds'. [250]

F. 255]	Book 2, Sutta 3. Loyalty	65
	No friend is he whose eye is ever on the watch to spy shortcomings out, —against a future breach. But if you rest secure, like babe on mother's breast, you have a friend indeed, whom none can rob you of.	[255]
	Whoso, while shouldering man's common lot, has reaped a harvest blest, accomplishes a happy life and well-earned meed of praise.	[256]
	But he who, in aloofness, tastes true Peace, puts haunting dread away, and wickedness, and quaffs those draughts of bliss the Doctrine gives.	[257]

	In quest of weal, full many gods and men have ponder'd over fortune's choicest boons. Tell me, I pray, what boon stands out supreme.
The Lord:	"Tis shunning fools, consorting with the wise, and heartfelt worship of the worshipful;	[259]
	'tis life in scenes befitting spent, a past of garner'd goodness, aspiration high;	[260]
	'tis lore profound and skill, obedience to rules prescribed, and well-weighed utterance;	[261]
	'tis ministry to parents, tender care for wife and child, an undistracting trade;	[262]
	'tis largesse, pious living, tender care for kith and kin, conduct beyond reproach;	[263]

Thus have I heard. Once, while the Lord was staying at Gayā near Stone-Couch in the domain of the sprite Sūciloma, the sprites Khara and Sūciloma were passing close by the Lord.

That's an anchorite, said Khara,

No, it is not, answered Süciloma;—though he looks anchoritish. Wait till I make sure whether he is a real anchorite or only looks like one.

Accordingly, the sprite, with bristles like needles, went and brushed up against the Lord,—who drew back.

You're afraid of me, anchorite, said the sprite.

No, said the Lord; I am not afraid of you; but contact with you is unpleasant.

Î will ask you a question, anchorite; if you do not answer it, I'll scare you out of your wits, or rive your heart, or fling you by the heels across the Ganges.

Sir, replied the Lord, in all the wide world of gods, Māras, and Brahmās, I see no one among anchorites and brahmins, gods or men, who could do to me what you suggest. However, sir, ask what you will.

Hereupon, the sprite Sūciloma addressed the Lord in these stanzas:-

Whence spring ill-will and lusts? [270]
Whence likes, dislikes, and dread?
Whence thoughts which plague the mind as boys a captive crow?

The Lord: 'Self' breeds ill-will and lusts, dislikes and likes and dread, and thoughts which plague the mind as boys a captive crow.

Sutta 7. Brahminism's Golden Age

Thus have I heard. Once while the Lord was staying at Sāvatthī in Jeta's grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's pleasaunce, there came to him a number of Kosalan brahmins of great wealth—broken and old, aged and stricken in years, drawing to their life's close—who, after courteous salutations, took their seats to one side, saying: Are the brahmins of to-day in accord, Gotama, with the brahminic outlook of the brahmins of old?

No, brahmins; they are not.

If it is agreeable to you, sir, please tell us what was the brahminic outlook of the brahmins of old.

Give ear then and hearken; I will tell you. Certainly, sir, answered they in assent.

The Lord began:-

In self-control and strict austerity the ancient sages dwelt; the fivefold strands of pleasure they renounced, themselves to save.	[284]
No herds had brahmins then, no gold or pelf; their wealth was holy lore and holy life.	[285]
They deemed the common scraps outside folks' doors to be faith's offering for brahmin needs.	[286]
The rich of country sides and realms at large great court and homage to these brahmins paid with garments dyed and couches and abodes.	[287]
Inviolate, invincible were they, shielded from harm by holiness of life; and on a brahmin no man closed his doors.	[288]
For eight and forty years as celibates the early brahmins lived, in quest devout of ken and vision and of holy life.	[289]
For wives these brahmins sought no other caste, and never purchased brides; 'twas their delight to pass their wedded lives in bonds of love.	[290]
'Twas only when a period was o'er, that brahmins knew their wives,—and not between.	[291]

F. 292]	Book 2, Sutta 7. Brahminism's Golden Age	73
	Brahmins prized holy living, rectitude, meek kindly gentleness, austerities, patient forbearance, tender mercy, ruth.	[292]
	The pattern brahmin—steadfast, resolute—not e'en in dreams had carnal intercourse.	[293]
	By his example, wisdom's sons were brought to prize forbearance, virtue, holy life.	[294]
	They asked but rice, beds, garments, ghee, and oil; and with such gifts they made their offerings; —no cows were slaughter'd for their sacrifice.	[295]
	Holding that cows,—like parents, brothers, kin—were their best friends, the source of healthful things,	[296]
	of food, well-being, goodliness, and strength, —grateful for this, they never slaughter'd cows.	[297]
	Tall, goodly, debonair, and famous men were brahmins then, inspired by zeal to grow to their own standards high of right and wrong; and, while these lived on earth, mankind fared well.	[298]
	Then came corruption. Bit by bit, they saw the monarch's splendour, women richly dight,	[299]
	steeds yoked to chariots, gay coverlets, stately abodes, and chamber'd palaces,	[300]
	girt round with crowded byres, and graced with troops of women fair to view;—vast mundane wealth those brahmins saw, and, seeing, coveted.	[301]
	Thereon, they framed these verses and they sought Okkāka;—'King', said they, 'abounding wealth is thine and substance; offer sacrifice! great store, great wealth hast thou; make sacrifice!'	[302]
	Thereon the king, that doughty charioteer, won o'er by brahmins, offered sacrifice of horses, human victims, and the rest; and, at the close, to brahmins largesse gave	[303]
	of kine, beds, garments, women richly dight, steeds yoked to chariots, gay coverlets,	[304]
	stately abodes, and chambered palaces, filled full of gear.—The king this largesse gave.	[305]

F. 306]	Book 2, Sutta 7. Brahminism's Golden Age	75
	But largesse fired their passion more to get; their craving grew and grew. Once more they sought Okkāka, with these verses newly framed:—	[306]
	'As earth and water, gold and silver, so are cows a primal requisite of man. Great store, great wealth is thine; make sacrifice!'	[307]
	Thereon the king, that doughty charioteer, won o'er by brahmins, for the sacrifice doomed cows by hundred-thousands to the knife.	[308]
	—The cows that do no hurt with horn or hoof, yes, gentle lamblike cows that fill the pail, he bade be taken by the horn and slain.	[309]
	'Tis wrong! 'tis wrong!' arose th' united wail of Brahmās, Indra, Titans, ogres too, as cows were butcher'd for the sacrifice.	[310]
	Diseases, which of yore were only three —desires, and hunger, and senility— with cattle-killing rose to ninety-eight!	[311]
	'Of old began this outrage; harmless cows are slain by guilty sacrificers' hands ':	[312]
	thus, thus, the wise condemn this ancient guilt, and folk condemn the sacrificers' crime.	[313]
	When right thus perished, straightway discord split farmers and serfs, and split the nobles' ranks, while wives looked down upon their lords with scorn;	[314]
	nobles and 'Brahmā's kin', with folk of rank, flouting their birthright, fell a prey to lusts.	[315]

Hereupon, those brahmins of great wealth said to the Lord:—Wonderful, Gotama! quite wonderful! Just as a man might set upright again what had been cast down, or reveal what had been hidden away, or tell a man who had gone astray which was his way, or bring a lamp into the dark so that those with eyes to see might see the things about them,—even so in many ways has Gotama made his Doctrine clear. We come to the reverend Gotama as our refuge, and to his Doctrine and to his Community. We ask him to accept us as followers who have found an abiding refuge from this day forth while life lasts.

Sutta 8. The Good Ship

As gods their homage pay to Indra, pay thou thine to him who teaches thee. Well-pleased thereby, thy sage will make the Doctrine plain.

When earnest study guides along the way ordained, the leal disciple comes, through converse with his sage. to grasp, to see, to know.

But with a sorry dolt, who fails to win the goal. vet envies those who do. the student misses Truth and dies with doubts still rife.

As one whom th' headlong rush of some vast stream in spate whirls willy-nilly down, -can he help others o'er?

So he who grasps not Truth and heeds not learning's voice, a doubter, knowing nought, -can he gain others o'er?

As on a good stout ship. equipped with helm and oar, a man expert and skilled can ferry many o'er;

-so he who knows, who's trained, deep student, calmly sure, by his full knowledge wins hearers who're ripe to learn.

So pick a good and wise and learned teacher; tread the path of Truth he shows, till insight bring thee bliss.

Rāhula	: No constant dwelling with my teacher leaves me scornful; always do I honour him who bears aloft the torch which lights mankind.	[336]
The Lord	Leave pleasure's fivefold strands,—so sweet, so dear; and, led by Faith, leave home, to end all Ills.	[337]
	Choose worthy friends; a distant lodging seek, remote and quiet; sparing be in food	[338]
	and raiment, alms, the requisites, and bed. Crave not for these, lest back to earth thou come.	[339]
	Obey the code; control thy senses five; watch well thy body; grow to loathe the world.	[340]
	Forsake the gay appearances of things, where passion reigns. In things austere, not gay, school thou thy heart to fixity and calm.	[341]
	Foster what harbours no appearances. Discard all trend to pride; pride comprehend and thou shalt go thy way serene and calm.	[342]

It was in this wise that, in these stanzas, the Lord again and again exhorted the reverend Rāhula.

Sutta 12. Kappa's Destiny

Thus have I heard. Once while the Lord was staying in the Agg-Alava shrine in Alavi, there had passed away at the shrine, not long before, the Elder Nigrodha-Kappa, who had been the director of the reverend Vangīsa; and Vangīsa in his private meditations speculated whether his old director had, or had not, passed utterly away. Rising from these meditations at eventide, the reverend Vangīsa betook him to the Lord, and, taking his seat to one side after due salutations, told the Lord of his speculations about his old director. Then, rising up from his seat, with his right shoulder respectfully bared, and with his folded palms extended towards the Lord, the reverend Vangīsa addressed him in these stanzas:—

Teacher beyond compare, who solvest here and now all doubts, we come to ask about an Almsman famed who died in placid calm.		[343]
As 'Banyan-Kappa' thou didst name that brahmin, Lord, (so leal to thee) who sought Release with tireless zeal and unrelaxing grip.		[344]
All-seeing Sákyán, reveal thy servant's lot. Teacher without a peer, we long to learn of thee;		[345] resolve our doubts; declare if he has ceased to be! O thou, who seest all, speak out among us here as speaks among the gods Sakka the thousand-eyed.		[346]
Deluding bondages, —th' allies of ignorance, the harbourers of doubt— vanish before the Lord, whose gaze transcends man's sig	ht.	[347]

	Haste then to lift thy voice so sweet, and, like a swan with outstretched neck, ring out in strains melodious; —apt audience are we.	[350]
	Yes; He who's cleansed and done with birth and death, will tell! 'Tis not to please the crowd I ask this; but to learn the verdict of Truth's Lords.	[351]
	Thy comprehension holds the power to make all clear. Once more, with clasped hands, we pray thee, matchless sage, to leave us not astray.	[352]
	O thou, whose vision spans all truth! Untiring sage, O leave us not astray! As folk in summer heat for water pine, pine I to hear thy words flow forth.	[353]

Dhammika	: What conduct, Gotama,	[376]

Dnammika:	what conduct, Gotama, perfects, as followers, both those that homeless are and those that dwell in homes?	[379]
	For, thou know'st well the lot and goal of gods and men, —thou matchless judge of Weal, 'Buddha most excellent'!	[377]
	In pity (knowledge won) thou did'st reveal the Truth and unveil all, pure seer, to flood the world with light.	[378]

		News of 'a Conqueror' drew Indra's elephant (of elephants the king), who joyed to hear thy talk.	[379]
		Came too the fairies' king, thy Doctrine to explore. Such answers thou didst give as he rejoiced to hear.	[380]
		Trained Jains and Mendicants all failed to vanquish thee, —as they who stand stock-still catch not the fleet of foot.	[381]
	The Lord:	Trained brahmins, ripe in years, —with others keen to air their point of view—are led t' embrace thy saving Truth.	[382]
		For, 'tis thy saving Truth,— subtile, but preached so well— for which all yearn. Vouchsafe, an answer, Lord, to us!	[383]
		Let th' Almsmen seated round with these lay followers learn from thy lips (as gods hearken to Indra's words) thy Lore immaculate!	[384]
		Give ear, ye Almsmen! Hear, and keep, the rules prescribed:— Let seekers after Weal, behave as anchorites.	[385]
		Go not thy round when noon is past; betimes seek alms. Snares greet th' untimely guest; th' enlighten'd time their rounds.	[386]
		Before thou seek'st thy meal, clear thou thy mind of zest for forms, sounds, odours, taste, and touch,—which turn men's heads.	[387]

	Thine alms received, return alone, to sit apart and think,—with fixed mind that never strays abroad.	[388]
-	In talk with pious folk or Almsmen, let thy theme the Doctrine's virtues be, —not spite, not finding fault.	[389]
	If men assail, let us not heed these shallow pates, who cling to this or that as vagrant minds dictate.	[390]
	Let wisdom's son, who heard his Lord, treat alms, cell, bed, water and rinsings, just as means, and nothing more.
	Such reason'd use will leave an Almsman as unstained as lotus-leaf,—whereon no drop of water rests.	[392]
	To conduct which perfects lay-followers I pass. (For, marriage these forbids to grow to Almsmen's scope.)	[393]
	Slay not, nor doom to death, nor sanction slaughter. Do no violence to aught that lives,—or strong or weak.	[394]
	No layman, wittingly, should thieve, or order theft, or sanction any theft; —take but what others give.	[395]
	And shun incontinence as 'twere a pit of fire, or, failing continence, debauch no wedded wife.	[396]

	In conclaves, courts, or talk, let him not lie; let him not prompt or sanction lies; —let him renounce untruth.	[397]
	Layman, observe this law:— Shun drink; make no man drink; sanction no drinking. Mark how drink to madness leads.	[398]
	Through drink fools sin, and egg lax brethren on to sin. So flee this maddening vice, this folly, bliss of fools.	[399]
	"Slay not, nor steal, nor lie; from strong drink keep away; refrain from lechery; touch not wrong meals o' nights;	[400]
	eschew both scents and wreaths; spread on the ground thy bed." (These eightfold sabbath-rules the saving Buddha framed.)	[401]
	So make thy sabbath vows as week succeeds to week, and keep with pious hearts this eightfold festival.	[402]
	At morn, these vows performed, with pious, thankful heart be wise and of thy means give Almsmen food and drink.	[403]
	Cherish thy parents well; follow a righteous trade. —Thus shall the layman staunch reach realms of light above.	[404]

III. THE LONG BOOK

Sutta 1. Gotama's Pilgrimage

My tongue shall tell his going forth from home, shall tell how he, our Seer, left house and home for Pilgrimage, and why he chose that life.	[405]
Because he saw 'a hole and corner life' was all a house and home could give, the Lord went forth from home, embracing homelessness.	[406]
A Pilgrim now, he shunned all evil deeds and lived his life aright, with blameless lips.	[407]
To Rājagáha come, th' Enlighten'd One, by high distinction stamped, in quest of alms entered the hill-girt gorge of Mágadhá.	[408]
As from his royal palace he looked down, King Bimbisāra thus addressed his court:—	[409]
'Mark, sirs, that man, so handsome, tall, and calm, of goodly gait, with gaze a plough's length on,	[410]
with eyes on earth downcast, of set intent! He comes, methinks, of no mean humble stock. Let servants speed to track that Almsman down.'	[411]
So royal servants tracked the Almsman's steps to find where he would go and where would stay.	[412]
With senses' portals guarded, self-controll'd, from house to house he duly went for alms and quickly filled his bowl,—mindful, alert.	[413]
His round for alms now o'er, from out the town our sage departed, climbing Páṇḍavá to find a lodging on its craggy heights.	[414]
Marking his lodging down, the messengers drew near, while one went back who told the king:-	[415]
'Like puissant tiger, or a lion, sire, within a cavern on the eastward crags of rugged Paṇḍava, your Almsman sits.'

	Hearing the news, with speed the noble prince drove forth from town towards Mount Pandava;	[417]
	and when no further he could ride, on foot the monarch made his way till him he reached.	[418]
	Then, seated, after courteous exchange . of seemly greetings, thus the monarch spoke:	[419]
	'Thou'rt young,—a stripling still in early bloom! Thy goodly mien bespeaks a gallant prince	[420]
	his host arraying, elephants in van. Lo! Here I offer wealth to spend thereon, and ask thee to disclose thy lineage.'	[421]
The Lord	I: Flanking Himálaya, in Kósalá, yonder extends a land both rich and brave.	[422]
	By lineage 'the Kinsmen of the Sun' are we, and Sākiyans by family. —Such was the stock I left behind me, sire, having no appetite for pleasure's toys.	[423]
	Alive to all the perils pleasure brings, and finding in Renunciation peace, I'll struggle onward.—Thus my mind finds bliss.	[424]
	Sutta 2. Gotama's Struggle
	As, purged of self by struggles stern, I sat in Reverie beside Neráñjará, resolved to win by insight perfect peace,	[425]
	came Māra, breathing words of ruth, to say how lean and ill I looked, how nigh to death.	[426]
	'Death owns' (said he) 'a thousand parts of thee, and life can claim but one. Hold fast to life! Life's best; for, living, thou'lt store merit up.	[427]
	If thou wilt lead a pious life and tend the fires of sacrifice, much merit will accrue. By struggles what wilt thou achieve?	[428]
	Rough is the road, the struggle desperate.' (Thus Māra, standing by the Buddha's side.)	[429]

F. 430]	Book 3, Sutta 2. Gotama's Struggle	103
The Lord	To Māra's words the Lord made answer thus:— Thou Evil One! Thou congener of sloth!	[430]
	I lack no peddling rudiments like these; no jot of suchlike 'merit' profits me! Māra should speak to those who 'merit' lack.	[431]
	Seeing that faith and energy and lore have purged all Self away, why talk of 'life'?	[432]
	The wind dries rivers up;—shall this my blood still course when Self is dead, when Self has gone?	[433]
	While blood is drying up, the humours too dry up; and with decay of flesh my mind grows calmer; stronger grows its watchfulness, its garner'd Lore, its concentration rapt.	[434]
	As thus I dwell, who 've braved and borne pain's worst, my heart for pleasure feels no zest at all. Behold then, Māra, how a man is cleansed.	[435]
	Pleasures of sense compose thy foremost ranks; dislikes thy second; thirst and hunger form thy third array; cravings come fourth; the fifth	[436] is sloth and torpor; sixth faintheartedness; doubts make the seventh; th' eighth,—pretence, hard her	[437] art, and pelf, repute, the pride of place, with fame ill-gotten, scorn of others, praise of self.	[438]
	Black Māra, such is thine attacking force, which only heroes overcome in fight, and in their conquest find abiding Weal.	[439]
	Shall I cry craven? Nay; a pest on life! I'd sooner die than brook defeat—and live.	[440]
	(Engulfed in this world's bogs, some anchorites and brahmins wholly sink from sight and view, and never come to know the path saints tread.)	[441]
	Seeing this host arrayed, with Māra there riding his elephant of war, I go to fight him. May he never beat me back!	[442]
	Thy hosts—which neither men nor gods can rout—with Lore I'll crush, as pebbles smash a bowl.	[443]

	As Captain of my thoughts, with set resolve, from realm to realm I'll find me followers	[444]

Māra	'For seven years I might keep dogging him, yet with the watchful Buddha get no chance!	[446]
	To see if it was soft and good to eat, a crow hopped round a stone that looked like fat;	[447]

The Lord	In grief, the sprite then let his lute slip down, as, sick at heart, he vanished out of sight.	[449]

Sutta 3. Apt words

Thus have I heard. Once while staying at Sāvatthī in Jeta's grove (&c.), the Lord spoke as follows:—There are four respects which characterize words apt and not inapt, words irreproachable and beyond reproach from the discerning. And what are the four? Take the case, Almsmen, of an Almsman who always speaks aptly and never inaptly, whose discourse is of the Doctrine only and not of vain matters, whose words are always kindly and never unkind, always truthful and never false. These four respects characterize apt speech. Thus spoke the Lord; and when the Blessed One had thus spoken, he, as Master, went on to say:—

Apt speech the good rank first, and, second, Doctrine's themes, the third is kindly speech, and fourth is truthfulness.

Here the reverend Vangīsa rose from his seat and, with his right shoulder bared and with folded palms outstretched, said to the Lord that a thought had struck him. Being bidden to express it, Vangīsa extolled the Lord to his face in suitable verses, saying:—

Speak thou what neither breeds thyself remorse nor hurts another.—Suchlike speech is apt.	[451]
Speak only kindly words, welcome to hear; avoid all railing; kindly be thy words.	[452]

'Brāhmaņo [hi] ce tvam brūsi, mañ ca brūsi abrāhmaṇam, tam tam Sāvittim pucchāmi tipadam catuvīsat-akkharam.'

"Truth is Nirvāna's speech' (the adage runs); [453] truth, weal, and Doctrine (so 'tis said) make saints.

The Buddha's words of peace, which show the way [454] to win Nirvāna and to end all Ill, rank far above all other spoken words.

Sutta 4. Offerings

Thus have I heard. Once while the Lord was staying among the Kosalans on the banks of the river Sundarikā, the brahmin Sundarika-Bhāradvāja was busy there with fire offerings and with ministering to the sacrificial fire; and when all was over and done, he rose up and was looking round in all the four directions to find on whom to bestow what remained over from his sacrifice, when he became aware of the Lord seated close by at the foot of a tree, enveloped—head and all—in his cloak. So, taking in his left hand the remains from the sacrifice and the waterpot in his right hand, the brahmin moved towards the Lord. At the sound of the brahmin's approaching footsteps, the Lord uncovered his head. 'Why, it's only a shaveling, a wretched shaveling!'—said the brahmin to himself and he was minded to turn back. But he bethought him that there were some brahmins too who shaved their heads, and that he might ask the Lord about his descent. So the brahmin came up and asked the Lord what he was by birth.

The Lord: No brahmin I, no prince, no farmer, or aught else.
All worldly ranks I know, but, knowing, go my ways as—simply nobody.

Homeless, in Pilgrim garb, with shaven crown, I go my way alone, serene.
—To ask my birth is vain.

The Brahmin: Nay, sir; when brahmins meet they never fail to ask if 'tis a brahmin they address.

The Lord: If you deny to me the brahminhood you claim, I ask you then of Savitti, with clauses three, two dozen syllables.

Book 3, Sutta 4. Offerings

The Brahmin: What moved so many sages—brahmins, nobles, and others—to make oblations to deities here on earth? [458]

The Lord: If saints partake (say I), the donor's thereby blest.

The Brahmin: A blessing sure is mine who find a saint in thee. Had I not found thy like, my cake had gone elsewhere.

The Lord: Well, brahmin, since you are in quest of Weal, draw near and question me.

You'll find in me a sage good, taint-less, want-less, calm.

The Brahmin: My delight, Gotama, is in offerings; I am anxious to make offerings; but know not how.

Pray, teach me, sir,-

what offerings will bless.

The Lord: Hearken, then, brahmin; and I will expound the Doctrine to you:—

Judge not by birth, but life. As any chips feed fire, mean birth may breed a sage noble and staunch and true.

Let brahmins 'merit' seek by offerings where truth and self-control hold sway, with lore and holy life; and where the homeless, dead [464] to pleasure, temperate,

Sutta 5. Largesse

Thus have I heard. Once while the Lord was staying near Rājagaha at Vulture's Peak, a young brahmin named Māgha came to him and after courteous greetings took his seat to one side, saying to the Lord:—I am generous, Gotama, accessible and openhanded. I seek my substance aright, and from what I thus get and obtain I give away to a single individual, or to two or more recipients—up to a hundred or more. Now tell me, Gotama, do I by all these doles and oblations store up much merit?

Certainly you do, young brahmin; so would anyone who is generous, accessible and openhearted,—seeking his substance aright and, from what he has thus got and obtained, giving away to a single individual, or to two or more recipients, up to a hundred or more.

Thereupon, Magha addressed the Lord in these stanzas:-

Māgha: Skilled judge of men's requests, who goest, yellow-robed, thy homeless way,—I ask thee, Gotama, to whom should open-handed folk, who merit seek, do well to offer food and drink?

admits to Bráhmā's realms.

Hereon, the young brahmin Māgha said to the Lord:—Wonderful, Gotama, quite wonderful! Just as a man might set upright again ... (&c., as at p.35) ... from this day forth while life lasts.

Sutta 6. Sabhiya's Questions

Thus have I heard. Once while the Lord was staying at Rājagaha in the Bamboo grove where the squirrels were fed, a certain deity who in life on earth had been a relation of Sabhiya the Wanderer, propounded certain questions, with the injunction to Sabhiya to follow any anchorite or brahmin who could answer them. After learning these questions from the deity, Sabhiya betook him to anchorites and brahmins who had confraternities and schools, and were known and famed as heads of schools and founders of saving creeds and were held in high popular repute,—such as Pūraṇa Kassapa, Makkhali Gosāla, Ajita Kesa-Kambali, Pakudha Kaccāyana, Sañjaya Belaṭṭhiputta, and Nāta-putta the Jain; and to each of these six he put those questions. But not one of them could furnish the answers; each and all of them, on being questioned by Sabhiya, showed temper and irritation and resentment, and put counter-questions of their own to Sabhiya, till he was tempted to abandon the higher life for a life of pleasure.

But the thought came to him that, over and above these six, there was the anchorite Gotama, who equally had a confraternity and a school of his own, and was known and famed as the head of a school and the founder of a saving creed, and was held in high popular repute. Why not ask Gotama?

Then followed the thought that all those personages whom he had already asked without success, were old and venerable men of long standing as rattaññū cirapabbajitā samghino gaṇino . . . mam yev' ettha paṭipucchanti. Kim pana me samaṇo Gotamo ime pañhe puṭṭho vyākarissati? Samaṇo hi Gotamo daharo c' eva jāṭiyā navo ca pabbajjāyāṭi.'

Atha kho Sabhiyassa paribbājakassa etad ahosi:—'Samano kho daharo ti na uññātabbo, na paribhotabbo; daharo pi ce samano hoti, so ca hoti mahiddhiko mahānubhāvo. Yan nūnâham samanam Gotamam upasamkamitvā ime pañhe puccheyyan ti?'

Atha kho Sabhiyo paribbājako yena Rājagaham tena cārikam pakkāmi, anupubbena cārikam caramāno yena Rājagaham, Veļuvanam, Kalandakanivāpo, yena Bhagavā ten' upasamkami, upasamkamitvā Bhagavatā saddhim sammodi, sammodanīyam katham sārānīyam vītisāretvā ekamantam nisīdi. Ekamantam nisinno kho Sabhiyo paribbājako Bhagavantam gāthāya ajjhabhāsi.—

- 5. Pajjena katena attanā (Sabhiyâti Bhagavā) [514] parinibbānagato vitinnakamkho, vibhavañ ca bhavañ ca vippahāya, vusitavā khīnapunabbhavo,—sa "bhikkhu".

anchorites, and that, as they had all failed to answer the questions, how could answers be expected from Gotama,—who was so junior in years and had only become an anchorite so recently?

But here came the thought to Sabhiya that an anchorite was not to be despised and scorned on grounds of youth, and that if a young man became an anchorite, he attained great potency and powers. So why not ask Gotama the questions?

Thereupon, Sabhiya the Wanderer set out on an alms-pilgrimage to Rājagaha and at last found the Lord in the Bamboo grove where the squirrels were fed and, after courteous greetings sat down to one side, addressing the Lord in these stanzas:—

Sabhiya: Doubt and perplexity bring me with questions here; I pray you make all clear; expound their full import as I put each in turn.

The Lord: Thou comest from afar with questionings; and I will answer each in turn and show its full import.

So ask me what thou wilt and I will answer it.

Thought Sabhiya to himself:—It is wonderful, it is marvellous, how the anchorite Gotama has accorded me the hearing which all those other anchorites and brahmins refused me! So in gladness and joy, the elated and jubilant Sabhiya asked the Lord the following question:—

What stamps 'the Almsman true'? What makes him 'meek' and 'schooled'? What marks 'Enlightenment'? Answer me, Lord, I pray.

The Lord: The 'Almsman true' is he who treads his chosen path up to Nirvāna, quit of doubts, not troubling if life closes or runs on,
—the man who greatly lived and now hath slain rebirth.

The man of watchful poise who harms no living thing, the stainless anchorite—beyond life's Flood, devoid of arrogance,—is 'meek'.

He's 'schooled' who drills each thought—self-bred or from without—, whom scrutiny of this and other worlds has taught calmly to wait death's call.

'Enlightenment' is his whose piercing eye surveys all ages, and perceives how creatures come and go to tramp their dismal round; who—spotless, stainless, pure has done with birth and death.

Thereon, in gladness and joy at the Lord's words, the elated and jubilant Sabhiya asked his next question:—

What stamps a 'Brahmin', Lord?
—an 'Anchorite'?—a 'Saint'?
What makes a 'Paragon'?
Answer me, Lord, I pray.

The Lord: 'Brahmin' is he who—quit of evil, stedfast, rapt—has left rebirth behind for calm, consummate Peace.

True 'Anchorite' is he who, finding anchorage beyond works good or bad, by faultlessness has plumbed both this and other worlds, and vanquished birth and death. [520]

	The 'Saint' has washed away all evil, inly bred or from without; no more he'll enter time—like gods and men, the brood of time.	[521]
	He who lives guiltless here, who, bursting bonds and ties, hugs naught, but wins Release, —is therefore 'Paragon'.	[522]
Hereupon, in gladne Sabhiya asked his next	ss and joy at the Lord's words, the elate question:—	d and jubilant
	Whom do th' enlighten'd term 'field's conqueror'? What makes a 'skilled' man?—what a 'sage'? and what proclaims the 'seer'? Answer me, Lord, I pray.	[523]
The Lord:	When thought on fields to grow bliss—human or divine— uproots all zest for fields, a man has 'conquer'd fields'.
	When thought on barns to store bliss—human or divine— uproots all zest for barns, a man attains to 'skill'.	[525]
	When thought on senses' range (internal or without) has left conviction clear —above all hopes or fears—, that makes a man a 'sage'.	[526]
	A 'seer' is he who knows all outlooks good or bad, selfbred or from without; whom gods and men revere; who bursts all ties and snares.	[527]

Hereon, in gladness and joy at the Lord's words, the elated and jubilant Sabhiya asked his next question:—

What stamps 'th' adept in lore'? [528]
What makes him 'come to know'?
How gets he 'zeal'? And what is termed a 'scion', Lord?
Answer me. Lord. I pray.

The Lord: He who surveying lore [529]

(brahmins' and anchorites'), and, losing zest for things of sense, outgrows all lore,
—'tis he is 'lore's adent'.

He who detects the curse of 'personality' (disease's rootl), and plucks out all that bound him fast, —'tis he has 'come to know'.

He who, eschewing wrong, prevails o'er pains of hell, shews 'zeal' by battling on in staunch persistency.

He who snaps bonds within [532] and stubs all roots without, till he is free from roots and bonds,—a 'scion' is.

Hereon in gladness and joy at the Lord's words, the elated and jubilant Sabhiya put his next question:—

What stamps man 'Erudite'? [533]
What makes him 'Noble'?—What 'Upright'?—What 'Anchorite'?
Answer me, Lord, I pray.

The Lord: He who has learned and plumbed all outlooks, till—beyond all praise and blame—doubts pass, and with Release comes calm,
—he's wholly 'Erudite'.

Hereon, Sabhiya the Wanderer, bowing his head in homage at the Lord's feet, said:—It is wonderful, sir (&c., as at p. 25) confirmation as an Almsman with the Lord!

'Sabhiya, a former sectary of another school who seeks admission and confirmation in this Doctrine and Rule, first resides for four months, at the close of which period proved Almsmen admit and confirm him as an Almsman. I recognize a distinction between persons in this case.'

'If, sir, former sectaries of other schools have first to undergo a four months' probation before enrolment here, then I will reside for four years, at the close of which period let proved Almsmen admit and confirm me as an Almsman.'

So Sabhiya the Wanderer received admission and confirmation as an Almsman at the hands of the Lord. Nor was it long thereafter before the reverend Sabhiya, dwelling alone and aloof (&c., as at p. 25) was numbered among the Arahats.

Sutta 7. The Superman

Thus have I heard. Once when the Lord was on an alms-pilgrimage in the Anga country north of the Ganges, with a great train of Almsmen, numbering twelve hundred and fifty, he sojourned in the Anga township of Apaṇa across the river.

It came to the ears of Keniya of the matted-hair that the anchorite Gotama, a Sakyan who had gone forth from home to homelessness as a Pilgrim, was reported to have arrived at Āpaṇa with this great train in the course of an alms-pilgrimage. Such, according to report, was the high repute noised

So Keniya came to the Lord and, seating himself after greetings, was by the Lord instructed, roused, fired, and cheered onwards with a doctrinal discourse, at the close of which Keniya invited the Lord, with his Community, to take to-morrow's meal with him. Said the Lord:—There are no less than twelve hundred and fifty Almsmen with me;—and you are an adherent of the brahmins, Keniya!

A second time did Keniya tender his invitation, saying this made no difference; and a second time did he receive the same answer. But when the invitation was repeated for the third time, with the words: 'You have only to assent', the Lord, by his silence, accepted it. Then Keniya got up and went off to his own hermitage, where he told his friends and kinsfolk who was coming, and asked them to help. Readily enough, they set to work, some digging earth-ovens, some splitting firewood, some scouring pans, and others setting out water-jars, and placing seats ready,—while Keniya with his own hands prepared a round pavilion.

Now at that time there was living at Āpaṇa the brahmin Sela, who was versed in all three Vedas, was accomplished in ritual with the glosses thereon, in phonetics, and in etymology, as also in legends, which he could recite and explain; and he was not unversed in the world's duration and in the signs that mark a Superman; he had three hundred young brahmins to whom he taught the runes. At this time, moreover, Keniya of the matted-hair was an adherent of this brahmin Sela.

Accompanied by his three hundred pupils, the brahmin came in the course of a stroll to Keniya's hermitage and saw all Keniya's adherents busy with their several tasks, while Keniya with his own hands was preparing a round pavilion. At the sight, the brahmin said to Keniya:—What is all this? Is it a wedding-feast for a bridegroom or for a bride? Or is there a great oblation afoot? Or have you invited to a repast to-morrow Seniya Bimbisāra, king of Magadha, with all his host?

Said Keniya: It is no wedding-feast, Sela; nor is the king coming with all his host; but I have got a great oblation afoot. For the anchorite Gotama, who left his Sakyan home to be a Pilgrim, has arrived at Āpaṇa in the course of an alms-pilgrimage, with twelve hundred and fifty Almsmen in his train. Now, such, according to report, is the high repute noised abroad concerning this Gotama that he is said to be ... ($\mathcal{C}c$., as p. x35) ... the Lord Buddha. He it is who has been invited for to-morrow, he and his Community.

Do you say 'Buddha', Keniya?

Yes, I do, Sela.

Yes, I do, Sela.

Thought the brahmin to himself:—Rarely indeed is the title of 'Buddha' heard in the world. In our runes there have been handed down the two and thirty marks of a Superman, for whom, if he bears those marks, there awaits one of two careers and no third. Should he live a home life, he becomes Emperor over the four quarters of the earth, righteous in himself and ruling righteously, victorious abroad, enforcing law and order at home, and possessing the Seven Jewels, to wit,—wheel, elephant, charger, gem, queen-consort, treasurer, and counsellor. More than a thousand sons has he, heroes of might who trample down the enemy's host before them. Over all this earth to the shores of ocean he extends his sway by sheer righteousness alone and not by cudgel or sword. But, if, instead, he goes forth from home to homelessness as a Pilgrim, he becomes the Arahat All-Enlightened who lifts the veil from the world.

Said Sela aloud:—Where, Keniya, is Gotama now staying, this Arahat All-Enlightened?

In answer, Keniya stretched out his right arm and said:—Yonder, Sela, in that stretch of dark trees.

Then the brahmin proceeded to the Lord, attended by his three hundred young brahmins, to whom he gave the following instructions:—Move forward in silence, noiselessly in one another's footsteps; for, these Lords are hard of access, like solitary lions. And, while I am conferring with the anchorite Gotama, keep silent till my talk with him is over, and do not interrupt.

Arrived in the Lord's presence, the brahmin, seating himself after courteous greetings, scanned the Lord's body for the two and thirty marks of a Superman; and in time observed them all save two, namely the privities hidden in a sheath and the big tongue, concerning which two he was in doubt and perplexity, not feeling certain or sure.

Realizing precisely the brahmin's uncertainty of mind, the Lord put forth such a manifestation of psychic power that Sela could see the Lord's privities

Quite sure now about the presence of the two and thirty marks, Sela still did not know whether he possessed Enlightenment or not. But he remembered hearing from old and aged brahmins, teachers of teachers, that those who become Arahats All-Enlightened, reveal themselves when their praises are sung in their presence; and so he made up his mind to extol the Lord to his face in the following stanzas of eulogy:—

Perfect in body, goodly, Lord, art thou, well-grown, well-liking, golden-hued, with teeth agleam with lustre; vigour fills thy frame;
thy body's full perfection manifests each single sign that marks a Superman.	[549]
Clear-eyed and handsome, tall, upright, art thou, effulgent as a sun among thy train,	[550]
—so debonair, so golden-hued! Why waste thy beauty's prime as homeless anchorite?	[551]
As world-wide monarch thou should'st ride in state; and Ind from sea to sea should own thy sway.	[552]
Proud princes should thy village-headmen be! Rule thou mankind as sov'ran king of kings.	[553]
The Lord: Know, Sela, know that king indeed am I, —the peerless king of utter righteousness. In righteousness my sov'ran Wheel of Truth I roll, that nevermore shall backwards turn.	[554]
Sela: If All-Enlighten'd thou dost claim to be, the peerless king of utter righteousness, rolling in righteousness thy sov'ran Wheel,	[555]
—who ranks as Captain, next to thee, to keep thy Wheel still rolling onward in its course?	[556]

The Lord:	'Tis Sāriputta, whom I bred and reared, who keeps my Wheel still rolling on its course.	[557]
	What mind should know, I know; I am what man should be, and quit of all man should renounce; —'tis thus that, brahmin, Buddhahood is mine.	[558]
	All doubts of me dispel; place trust in me. —To see a Buddha is a boon most rare;	[559]
	but that rare boon thou may'st behold in me, who All-Enlighten'd am, of Healers chief,	[560]
	perfect and peerless, routing Māra's hosts, all foes subduing;—fear clouds not my bliss.	[561]
Sela:	Sirs, mark him! Mark how lion-like he speaks, —this Seer, this Healer, this great Conqueror.	[562]
	Lives there a man so base as not to trust at sight fell Māra's matchless conqueror?	[563]
	Let who will, follow; let the rest depart; —be mine the Pilgrimage with Wisdom's Lord!	[564]
Sela's pupils:	If you the All-Enlighten'd take as guide, ours too be Pilgrimage with Wisdom's Lord.	[565]
Sela:	Three hundred brahmins, Lord, with outstretched hands	[566]

Sela: Three hundred brahmins, Lord, with outstretched hands [566] here pray to lead the higher life with thee.

The Lord: That life, so fully preached, is here and now, yet outside Time. No barren Pilgrimage is his who lives that life persistently.

So the brahmin Sela and all his following were admitted to the Lord's Community, and confirmed therein.

Now, when night passed away, an excellent meal was prepared in his hermitage by Keniya, who sent to tell the Lord when everything was ready. Then the Lord, early that morning, duly robed and bowl in hand, proceeded to Keniya's hermitage and there sat down on the seat placed for him, accompanied by his train of Almsmen. With his own hands Keniya served the Lord and his Almsmen with that excellent meal without stint till all had had their fill. When the Lord had eaten and had removed his hands from his alms-bowl, Keniya went to him and, taking a low seat, sat down to one side, and, so seated, was thanked by the Lord in these stanzas:—

In largesse, fire-oblations take first rank; [568] of Vedic metres Sāvitrī is first; the king ranks first 'mong men, the sea 'mong streams; the moon ranks first among the lamps of night; and first of luminaries ranks the sun.

—For those who merit seek by charities, gifts to the Order profit most of all.

Having thanked Keniya of the matted-hair in these stanzas, the Lord arose and departed.

Dwelling alone and aloof, strenuous, ardent, and purged of Self, the reverend Sela, with his following, was not long before he won the prize in quest of which young men go forth from home to homelessness as Pilgrims, that prize of prizes which crowns the higher life;—even this did he think out for himself, realize, and attain, and in this did he dwell here and now, convinced that for him rebirth was no more, that he had lived the highest life, that his task was done, and that now there was nothing left of what he once had been. And the reverend Sela, with his following, was numbered among the Arahats.

Then he came with his following to the Lord, and, with his right shoulder respectfully bared and with his folded palms outstretched, addressed the Lord in these stanzas:—

We who a week ago sought refuge, seer, with thee, re-moulded by thy Doctrine come.

Enlighten'd Master, Sage, o'er Māra's hosts triumphant! Thou who, wrong propensities uprooting, for thyself salvation found and taught mankind to find salvation too!

Thou hast surmounted all that breeds rebirth, and extirpated Canker-growths within.
With naught to bind thee thrall to life, thou'rt free as forest lion from all fears or dread.

Three hundred Almsmen, Lord, with outstretched hands [573] pray thee, great Victor, forth to stretch thy feet that these, thy saints, may bow before them here!

Sutta 8. The Pangs of Grief

By no device can what is born not die, or length of days annul life's primal law. Like ripen'd fruits which threaten soon to drop, the constant threat of death dogs man from birth. As ev'ry earthen jar the potter shapes will broken be, so shows the life of man. Grown men and younglings, wise and simple,—all are thralls of death, all death's predestin'd prey. When they in death depart, no sire can save his son, nor kith save kin, from passing hence. Mark how—while kin stand round with loud laments—like kine to slaughter, men are hauled away. Since death and sure decay assail the world, the wise, who know its laws, forbear to grieve. Ye vainly weep, ye vainly wail, your dead, whose 'Whence' and 'Whither' both elude your ken. If wailing eased the mourner's self-made pangs, then, and then only, let the wise wail too. No; peace of mind comes not by grief and tears, —which do but add to pain and bring men low. Though self-sought pangs leave mourners pale and wan, they succour not the dead;—laments are vain. By hugging sorrow man to greater pain proceeds; his mourning leaves him sorrow's slave. Mark, too, how others, when their hour has come to dree their mortal weird, in death's grip writhe. Whate'er men plan, things turn out otherwise; and so with human loss;—'tis nature's way. What though life last a hundred years,—or more! [589] —Bereft of kin, man yields his life at last. Therefore, give ear to saints;—weep not; reflect, at sight of death, thou can'st not 'bring him back'.	Men cannot calculate, men cannot gauge, this life's brief troublous span, by woes beset.	[574]

F. 591] Book 3, Sutta 8. The Pangs of Grief

As with their house on fire man quench the flames

with water, let the stedfast sage be quick (as wind wafts cotton-down) to banish grief,	[591] wails, cravings, pangs. For his own weal, let him pluck out the shafts he plants in his own breast.	[592]

F---7

Those shafts pluck'd out, at ease, with heart at rest, he grieves not, but, o'ercoming grief, finds Peace.

Sutta 9. What is a Brahmin?

Thus have I heard. Once when the Lord was staying at Icchānankala, in the forests there, a large number of very well-known and wealthy brahmins were also at Icchānankala,—such as Cankī, Tārukkha, Pokkharasāti, Jāņussoņi, and Todeyya, with other very well-known and wealthy brahmins.

Now, as the young brahmins Vasettha and Bhāradvāja were walking and strolling up and down, they fell to discussing what makes a brahmin.

Bhāradvāja maintained that what made a brahmin was pure descent on both sides right back for seven successive generations of forbears, with no break or blemish in his lineage; whereas Vāseṭṭha contended that it was virtue and moral conduct which made a brahmin.

As neither could convince the other, Vāseṭṭha proposed, and Bhāradvāja agreed, to refer the matter to 'the anchorite Gotama', who was now staying in the forests of Icchānankala, and of whom the high repute noised abroad was that he was said to be:—'The Lord, Arahat All-Enlightened... (&c., as at p. 135)... the Lord Buddha.' Let us go to the anchorite Gotama, my good Bhāradvāja, said Vāseṭṭha; and, when we have found him, let us lay the matter before him and accept whatever he shall decide.

So be it, replied Bhāradvāja.

So together the two young brahmins went to the Lord, and, when they were seated after courteous greetings, Vāseṭṭha addressed the Lord in the following stanzas:—

Pokkhárasáti's pupil I; my friend [594] had Tárukkhá for master; both of us in Threefold Lore have passed and so profess; in all the Threefold Lore adepts are we,
in text and import, each his master's peer.

	On birth we differ. Bhāradvāja says 'tis 'birth' that makes a brahmin; I say 'life'. 'Tis thus we stand, O thou who seest all.	[596]
	Agree we cannot, so an answer crave from thee, for high Enlightenment renown'd.	[597]
	For, as with hands in adoration raised men hail the crescent moon, the world hails thee!	[598]
	Of Gotama, who brought the seeing Eye, we ask if birth or life the 'Brahmin' makes. Tell us; we know not, but would fain feel sure.	[599]
The Lord:	Types manifold of divers living things in order'd sequence I must first unfold, to show how nature stamps them diverse breeds.	[600]
	Regard the grass and trees, which ne'er proclaim, but prove, how nature stamps them diverse breeds.	[601]
	Pass next to insects, pass from moths to ants; and see how nature stamps them diverse breeds.	[602]
	regard four-footed creatures, great and small; and see how nature stamps them diverse breeds.	[603] regard the snakes whose length on belly goes; and see how nature stamps them diverse breeds.	[604] pass now to fish that dwell in water's depths; and see how nature stamps them diverse breeds.	[605]
	then pass to birds that wing their airy way; —all show how nature stamps them diverse breeds.	[606]
	While these thus widely differ, men alone show not that nature stamps them diverse breeds.	[607]
	They differ not in hair, head, ears, or eyes, in mouth or nostrils, not in eyebrows, lips,	[608]
	throat, shoulders, belly, buttocks, back, or chest, nor in the parts of shame, female or male,	[609]
	nor yet in hands or feet, in fingers, nails, in calves or thighs; in hue, or sound of voice; —naught shows men stamped by nature diverse breeds;	[610]

—whose bourn no gods, no men, no quire on high, can tell,—the Arahat from Cankers purged;	[644]

—within whose ken are lives he lived long since; whose vision takes in paradise and hell; for whom rebirth is dead. He 's 'Brahmin true'.	[647]
By general consent men's names and clans as useful designations current passed;	[648]
'twas long ere time evolved the novel view, till then unknown, that birth a 'Brahmin' makes.	[649]
—Birth neither Brahmin, nor non-Brahmin, makes; 'tis life and conduct moulds the Brahmin true.	[650]
Their lives mould farmers, tradesmen, merchants, serfs;	[651]
their lives mould robbers, soldiers, chaplains, kings.	[652]
'Tis thus the wise life's causal outcome see, discern what went before, what follows thence.	[653]
Their past decides how men shall fare,—like carts that needs must travel in the linchpin's wake.
'Tis self-denial, holy life, control, which make my Brahmin's perfect Brahminhood.	[655]
He who has won the Threefold Lore, the Saint who ne'er shall see rebirth,—He Bráhmā is (to them that know) and Sakka manifest.	[656]

Hereupon, the young brahmins Vāseṭṭha and Bhāradvāja said to the Lord:—Wonderful, Gotama; quite wonderfull...(&c., as at p. 25)... accept us as disciples who have found an abiding refuge, from this day forth whilst life shall last.

Sutta 10. Slander's doom

Thus have I heard. Once while the Lord was staying at Sāvatthī in Jeta's grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's pleasaunce, the Almsman Kokāliya came to the Lord and after salutations took his seat to one side, saying to the Lord:—Sāriputta and Moggallāna, sir, harbour evil desires and are fallen a prey to evil desires.

To this the Lord made answer:—Nay, Kokāliya; do not entertain this feeling against Sāriputta and Moggallāna,—who are good men.

The second time, Kokāliya said:—Although the Lord personally inspires me with trust and confidence, yet Sāriputta and Moggallāna do harbour evil desires and are fallen a prey to evil desires.

A second time the Lord repeated his answer.

A third time Kokāliya made his charge and received the same answer.

Then the Almsman Kokāliya rose up and departed, after saluting the Lord with deep reverence. He had not been gone long before pustules the size of a mustard-seed broke out all over his body, pustules which grew and grew to the size first of a lentil, then of a chick-pea, then of a jujube's kernel, then of a jujube, then of a myrobalan, then of a vilva fruit, and then of a quince;—then they broke, exuding pus and blood. That disease killed the Almsman Kokāliya, who passed hence to the Paduma Purgatory, all because he hardened his heart against Sāriputta and Moggallāna.

As night was waning, Brahmā Sahampati—in surpassing splendour, which flooded the whole of Jeta's grove with radiance—drew nigh to the Lord, saluted him and stood to one side, saying:—'Sir, the Almsman Kokāliya is dead and has passed to the Paduma Purgatory, all because he hardened his heart against Sāriputta and Moggallāna.' Sosaying, Brahmā Sahampati saluted the Lord with deep reverence and vanished.

When the night had gone, the Lord, addressing the Almsmen, told them of Brahmā Sahampati's visit and of his report of Kokāliya's death and rebirth in the Paduma Purgatory, all because of his animosity against Sāriputta and Evam vutte aññataro bhikkhu Bhagavantam etad avoca:—Kivadīgham nu kho, bhante, Padume niraye āyuppamāṇan ti?

Moggallāna. Thereupon, a certain Almsman asked the Lord how long a term of durance had to be spent in the Paduma Purgatory.

A term so long, answered the Lord, that it is not easy to express it in years, or in hundreds, or thousands, or even hundreds of thousands of years.

Could you give some idea of its duration, sir?

Yes, Almsman, answered the Lord. Imagine a Kosalan cartload of twenty measures of sesamum seed, and suppose that at the close of every century one single seed at a time were removed. Well, by this method, the cartload would be exhausted sooner than the term in a One-æon Purgatory,—a score of which last one Nirabbuda Purgatory, and a score of these one Ababa Purgatory, and a score of these one Atata Purgatory, and a score of these one Kumuda Purgatory, a score of these one Sogandhika Purgatory, a score of these one Uppalaka Purgatory, a score of these one Pundarīka Purgatory,—a score of which last one Paduma Purgatory. Now it was to Paduma that the Almsman Kokāliya passed hence, all because he hardened his heart against Sāriputta and Moggallāna.

Thus spake the Lord; and when the Blessed One had thus spoken, he went on, as Teacher, to say:—

In each man's mouth at birth there grows an axe, wherewith fools gash themselves by speaking ill.

The tongue which lauds blameworthy folk, or blames the laudable, ne'er wins felicity.

A trifling doom it is to lose [659] one's all, and liberty, at dice; a doom far greater is a heart at enmity with blessed saints.

An evil tongue, an evil mind, condemn to hell whoso maligns the saintly, till full tale is told of æons spent in Paduma.

False witness leads, like perjury, to hell; one equal doom awaits both villainies when this life ends.

Sutta 11. Asita's Nunc Dimittis

At noontide Asita the Sage [679] beheld the joyous Thrice-ten gods and Sakka-Indra at their head, waving their spotless robes in glee, Asita: At sight of their triumphant joy, [680] he reverently spoke these words:-What gladdens thus th' assembled gods? Say why ye wave your garments so. Not even when the war with fiends [681] crushed fiends and gave gods victory, was such excitement shown as now. What marvel cheers the gods to-day? They shout and sing to music's strains; [682] they toss their arms and dance around. Ye denizens of Meru's peaks, quick! tell me why; dispel my doubts. Deities: 'The future Buddha, pearl of pearls, [683] for peace and weal is born as man, a Sákván in Lumbinī.

-And thence our jubilation springs.

This matchless being, chief of men, hero, supreme o'er beings all, as with a kingly lion's roar in Sages' Wood shall start Truth's Wheel.'

When Asita heard this, straight down he went till he drew nigh Suddhódana's abode. and, seated there, addressed the Sákváns:-Where is the prince? I too would gaze on him.

Thereon, to Asita, that swarthy sage, the Sákyans shewed the newborn babe, who shone with golden sheen, like gold by craftsmen wrought, fresh from the furnace, and exceeding fair.

In joy and zest abounding, Asita beheld th' effulgent babe,-bright as a flame, pure as the riding moon, and radiant as shines the sun in cloudless autumn skies.

'sambodhipatto vicarati Dhammamaggam', gantvāna tattha samayam paripucchiyāno carassu tasmim Bhagavati brahmacariyam."

F. 688]	Book 3, Sutta xx. Asita's Nunc Dimittis	167
	A canopy aloft the gods upheld, with ribs of gold to spread the thousand widths of its expanse, while fans were waved on wands of gold; —yet none could see who held, or waved.	[688]
	Beneath that canopy so white there lay—like gold on samite laid—the babe, whom that swart anchorite, with matted locks, took up with joy.	[689]
	He took him up; and when his gaze found marks and signs his lore knew well, he lifted up his voice and cried:— 'He has no peer! He's mankind's best!'	[690]
	Here, rising thoughts of his approaching end reduced the sage to tears, whereat alarmed the Sákyans asked the weeping sage to say if danger would beset the new-born child.	[691]
	Seeing the Sákyans so disquieted, the sage made answer thus:—No harm to him can I foresee; no danger threatens him; no common clay is he;—give heed to me.	[692]
	To All-Enlightenment this child shall grow; in Utter Holiness, by pity moved, Truth's Wheel a-rolling he shall set, and spread his Saving Rule abroad both far and wide.	[693]
	But few are my remaining days of life, and meantime death will end my dwindling span, nor shall I hear his weighty Doctrine preached. 'Tis only this that saddens me the while.	[694]
	Cheering the Sákyans with his heart'ning words the sage from out the precincts passed, to lead the Higher Life. By pity moved, he bade his sister's son embrace the matchless Truth:—	[695]
	"Nephew (said he), when, later, thou shalt hear that: 'Th' All-Enlighten'd Buddha treads the Path his Doctrine shows',—go, seek him out, explore his gospel, lead the higher life with Him."	[696]

	Thus counsell'd by that kindly, helpful saint (the destined heir of utter holiness) this Nālaka lived on, in affluence of garner'd merit, keeping watch o'er Sense, till He, the future 'Conqueror', should come.	[697]
	But when news came 'a Conqueror has set his Wheel of Truth a-rolling', straight he sought, and found Him,—found Him and, believing, asked that prince of seers (since now the time once set by Asita had come):—'What makes "a Sage"?'	[698]
	(End of the Introductory verses.)
Nālaka:	What Asita foretold (said Nālaka) has turned out true! So tell me, Gotama, (whose mind has fathom'd ev'ry mental state)—	[699]
	when home is left to lead the Almsman's life, expound, o Sage, a sage's perfect way.	[700]
The Lord:	Learn then that perfect way (the Lord replied), 'Tis hard to compass, hard to tread; but still its secret I'll impart:—'Stand firm; stand fast!'	[701]
	Come praise, come blame,—still take it all as one. Let neither mar thine equanimity; let blame perturb thee not, nor praise inflate.	[702]

	Thine alms-round o'er, within thy wood repair and take thy seat beneath a spreading tree.	[708]
	There, in those dear recesses, find thy bliss beneath thy tree in lonely Reverie.	[709]
	At morn thy village seek, but take no joy in invitations or in lavish gifts;	[710]
	race not from door to door; in quest of alms seal thou thy lips and proffer no request.	[711]
	'They gave;—'twas well! Refused was I;—'tis well!' —thus minded seek, in either case, thy tree.	[712]

	My Rule embraces all things great and small; its single path alone conducts to Peace; but never once can senses Peace discern.	[714]
	But when an Almsman, from this welter freed, has shed his cravings, old anxieties about behaviour cease; distress departs.	[715]
	Learn then this perfect way (the Lord went on); —be like the razor safe within its sheath; clap tongue to palate, master appetite;	[716]

F. 721] Book 3, Sutta 11. Asita's Nunc Dimittis Yes; emptiness is loud, but fullness, calm; [721] the fool's a half-filled crock; the sage, a lake. Whene'er the Anchorite holds forth, his words are apposite and fraught with deep import:

are apposite and fraught with deep import; with knowledge he expounds the Doctrine's gist, and from the amplitude of knowledge speaks.

But he whose knowledge goes with self-control.

But he whose knowledge goes with self-control, [723] the sage who, though he knows, eschews much speech, 'tis he has wisdom won,—and wisdom found.

Sutta 12. Pairs to grasp

Thus have I heard. Once while the Lord was staying at Sāvatthī in the Old Pleasaunce in the palace of Migāra's Mother, he was sitting out, on the mid-month sabbath evening, among the Almsmen. Observing the Community of Almsmen around him to be wholly silent, the Lord addressed them, saying:—If you are asked, Almsmen, wherefore you listen to righteous, noble, saving, and all-enlightening homilies, your answer should be that you do so in order to comprehend to the full just a single pair of ideas. When asked to what pair you allude, you will reply that the first conception is Ill and its origin, and that the second is Ill's cessation and the path leading to that Cessation. For, if an Almsman fully grasps these two ideas, and if his life is earnest, ardent, and purged of Self, then you may anticipate for him one or other of two results,—either Illumination here and now, or else, if his stuff of existence be not wholly spent, no subsequent return to earth.

Thus spoke the Lord; and when he, the Blessed One, had thus spoken, he went on, as Master, to say:—

For, those who know not III and how III grows, who neither know how III is stilled and quenched nor know the Way to lay all III to rest,	[724]
—those miss Release, alike of heart and mind; they cannot end it all and reach the goal; they tramp the round of birth, decay, and death.	[725]
But they who know both Ill and how Ill grows, and also know how Ill is stilled and quenched and know the Way that lays all Ill to rest;	[726]
—these win Release of heart, Release of mind; these surely end it all and reach the goal; these nevermore shall know decay and birth.	[727]

If you are asked whether there be yet another mode of grasping the two ideas, and in what way, you will reply that the first conception is, that all Ill which comes about is consequent on the Stuff of Existence, whilst the second is that, by the utter and passionless destruction of this underlying stuff, Ill cannot come about. For, if an Almsman fully grasps these two ideas . . . (&c., as above) . . . went on, as Master, to say:—

Life's Stuff breeds ev'ry Ill, —breeds all the Ills there are.
The dolt who witlessly creates this stuff, piles Ill on Ill. Create it not, since thence all Ills are born.

'Tis Ignorance entails the dreary round
—now here, now there—of countless births and deaths.

'Tis Ignorance tricks purblind dolts to trudge th' inexorable round from life to life;
—but no hereafter waits for him who knows.

If you are asked . . (similar paragraph about) Plastic Forces . . . went on, as Master, to say:—

All growths of Ill from Plastic Forces spring; if Plastic Forces cease, no Ill can grow.

Aware that Plastic Forces breed all Ill, and clear that Ill's destruction comes about by stilling each and ev'ry Plastic Force and breaking down perceptions utterly, the wise—clear-eyed, equipped with Lore, who know— [733] o'ercoming Māra's yoke, face birth no more.

If you are asked . . . (similar paragraph about) Consciousness . . . went on, as Master, to say:-

> All growths of Ill from Consciousness arise; no Ills can grow, if Consciousness be stilled.

Aware that Consciousness begets all Ills, [735] and clear that Ill's destruction comes about by stilling Consciousness, the Almsman, quit of Consciousness, finds everlasting Peace.

If you are asked . . . (similar paragraph about) Contact (between a sense and its object in perception) . . . went on, as Master, to say:-

> Far, far, from bursting bonds are Contact's thralls, who drift along life's swirling stream, astray.

But they who Contact comprehend and know, [737] who fathom all that Contact means,-these, quit of Contact, find the everlasting Peace.

If you are asked . . . (similar paragraph about) Feelings . . . went on, as Master, to say:-

> All Feelings, inly bred or from without, [738] -with pain or pleasure, or with neither, fraught> the Almsman knows as Ills,-vain fleeting things [739] that come and go. From Feelings cleansed, he finds, when feelings die, the everlasting Peace.

If you are asked . . . (similar paragraph about) Cravings . . . went on, as Master, to say:-

> Wedded to Cravings, man perforce must pass 740 from life to life, must trudge now here, now there, yet never ends rebirth's exacting round.

Aware that Ills are Cravings' progeny, quell Cravings; clutch at nothing; watchful be, O Almsman, as you go your homeless way.

Life's Fuel feeds existence; what exists meets Ills; what's born must die; and so springs Ill.

The wise, who see that Fuel's stoppage stops rebirth, are saved by insight from rebirth. [743]

If you are asked . . . (similar paragraph about) toiling and moiling (at good works for 'merit's sake') . . . went on, as Master, to say:—

All growths of Ill from quest of 'merit' spring; [744] if 'merit's' quest be stopped, no Ill can grow.

Marking how 'merit's' baleful quest breeds Ills, [745] the Almsman who discards it all and wins Release, who craves no more for life renewed but garners peace of heart, has passed beyond rebirth and ne'er again shall be reborn.

If you are asked . . . (similar paragraph about) Sustenance . . . went on, as Master, to say:—

All growths of Ill from Sustenance proceed; [747] if Sustenance be stopped, no Ills can grow.

Marking how baleful Sustenance breeds Ill, [748] —plumb, comprehend, forswear all Sustenance!

Know inward Health by casting Cankers out; [749] walk circumspectly; keep the faith; for, so, by Lore the sage transcends the scheme of things.

If you are asked . . . (similar paragraph about) Waverings . . . went on, as Master, to say:—

banish distraction; quench each plastic force. Still unperturbed, still passionless, alert, and watchful, Almsman, go your homeless way.

Marking how baleful Waverings breed Ills,

If you are asked . . . (similar paragraph about) Quaking . . . went on, as Master, to say:-

> No Quakings trouble independent minds; [752]but thralls must tramp life's rounds, now here now there.

Marking how baleful thraldom fosters Ills. in independence, Almsman, unattached, alert, and watchful, go your homeless way. [753]

If you are asked whether there is yet another way of grasping the two ideas, and in what way, you will reply that the first conception is that the Formless is calmer than what has Form, whilst the second is that Cessation is calmer than the Formless. For, if an Almsman fully grasps these two ideas . . . (&c., as above) . . . went on, as Master, to say:-

> The denizens of Form and Formless worlds [754] blind to Cessation, face rebirth anew.

> But they who, versed in Form and Formlessness, [755] have in Cessation found Deliverance.

in triumph leave behind them Death's domain.

If you are asked whether there is yet another mode of grasping the two ideas, and in what way, you will reply that, first, what the world at large deems Truth has been rightly viewed as falsehood by the Noble through their consummate comprehension, whilst, secondly, the Noble hail as Truth what the world accounts falsehood. For, if an Almsman fully grasps these two ideas . . . (&c., as above) . . . went on, as Master, to say :-

> How pride of Self (where Self is none) inflates the world of gods and men! How sure they feel of personality's undoubted truth!

Picture it as they will, it's all a lie! —A lie because all fleeting things are false. [757]

No lie's Nirvana! This the Noble know, -they whom from hankerings the Noble Truths have freed, and crowned with everlasting Peace.

If you are asked whether there is yet another mode of grasping the two ideas, and in what way, you will reply that, first, what the world at large deems Weal has been rightly viewed as III by the Noble through their consummate comprehension, whilst, secondly, the Noble hail as Weal what the world accounts III. Thus spake the Lord; and when he, the Blessed One, had thus spoken, he went on, as Master, to say:—

Forms, sounds, tastes, smell, touch, thoughts—please, charm, and cheer, whilst deemed t'exist and have reality.	[759]
The world accounts them boons, them hails as Weal. But when they pass away, they 're ranked as Ills!	[760]
The Noble rank as Weal the utter rout of personality;—on this the Seer joins issue with the purblind world at large.	[761]
The Noble count as 'Ill' the worldling's 'Weal'; the worldling's 'Ill' the Noble hail as 'Weal'. —This puzzling thought perplexes empty pates.	[762]
Behind the veil is gloom; th' unseeing dwell in utter darkness. All is clear as day to virtue's eye, but hid—though nigh at hand—from brutish strangers to the Doctrine's truth.	[763]
This Truth eludes the ken of those who pine for life's continuance, who drift along life's swirling stream in Māra's deadly grip.	[764]
Who, save the Noble, has a right to know how, Cankerless, men pass away—to Peace?	[765]

Thus spoke the Lord. Glad at heart, those Almsmen rejoiced in what the Lord had said. During this exposition, the hearts of some three score Almsmen were delivered from Cankers once for all.

IV. THE BOOK OF OCTADS

Sutta 1. Desires

The man whose heart's desires are gratified 766] is glad indeed to see success secured. But, if his heart's desires and aims be foiled, [767] he smarts as if a dart had wounded him. Yet, should he shun desires as he would shun [768] a snake's head underfoot, by vigilance he overcomes the world's seductive lures. Whoso with boundless appetite desires [769] fields, lands, or gold, herds, horses, women, serfs, and kinsfolk,-him tumultuous desires (weak though they seem) o'ercome at last; they crush [770] their victim. Hereon Ills come surging in, like waves that flood some wrecked ship's crazy hold. [771] Therefore by watchfulness discard desires; expel them; bale your ship; and cross the Flood to safety's haven on the Further Shore.

Sutta 2. The Octad of the Den

o'ergrown with growths and bogged in crassness dense, a man is far from inward peace. For, hard indeed it is to give up pleasures here.

The creatures of desire, [773] mere slaves of mundane joys, shall scarce be saved,—since none by others can be saved, who ask to live To-day or Yesterday afresh.

Through pleasure's hot pursuit, its frenzied votaries close-fisted grow and base, till, plunged in Ills, they cry:—
'What shall we be, when dead?'

	When wrong conceptions fill the mind with prejudice, the man who looks to find a blessing there, builds hopes of Peace on shifting sands.	[784]
	As rooted prejudice is hard to quell, a man should test ideas he holds, discarding freely, till he holds the Doctrine's truth.
	The inly-washen saint, now freed from fancies fond of life hereafter, stripped of pride and error,—how place him? He stands apart!	[786]

	If dogma makes men pure, or if such lore ends Ill, then something not the Path makes pure an earthy man whose views give him the lie.	[789]
	'The Path—not things of sense—alone brings purity,' our self-less 'Brahmin' says, by 'merit's' quest unsmirched, aloof from mundane ends.	[790]
	Chopping and changing fails to calm distracted folk, —who now hold fast to this, and now to that, like apes that skip from bough to bough.	[791]
	Self-prompted, slaves of Sense pursue austerities. Not so the wise, who know, who grasp the Doctrine's truth.	[792]
	When once man's thought transcends what sense-impressions bring, when, thus inspired, he goes his clear-eyed way,—what lure can now unsettle him?	[793]
	No idols these set up, no 'final purity' do they affirm, who burst the chains of hankering and yearn for nothing more.	[794]
	Sinless, the Brahmin true, through ken and vision, grasps at nothing; passion-free, he does not plume himself on being passionless. No more has he to learn.	[795]

Sutta 5. The Octad of Perfection

And so strife dogs his days.

Whatever good he finds in works or things of sense, on that he fastens, set on that he fastens, set

Adepts dismiss as 'clogs'

his claims and arrogance. So, Almsman, do not build on works and things of sense; nor rear on lore or works [799]

a speculative view;
nor claim to be 'as good'
or 'worse' or 'better far'.

Unprejudiced and free, not based on learning's stores, owning no sect or school, holding no theories;

when pray'rs for future life —on earth, or elsewhere—cease, when scrutiny of 'creeds'

when things of sense all fail to wake a conscious thought, —how place this Brahmin true,

Sutta 7. Lechery

Tissa Metteyya: Tell us what harm befalls a lecher, sir, that we, thus schooled by thee, in privacy may put in practice what thou shalt enjoin.

The Lord: In wickedness, outside my Doctrine's pale, the lecher lives a base, ignoble life.

His old repute is gone; his fame departs. Be warned; with all your might shun lechery!

Lewd thoughts engross his abject 'reveries', -whom others' censure leaves morose and glum,

Reputed wise-whilst upright anchoritehe's scouted as a dolt for lechery.

These perils known, a sage should straitly walk alone, aloof, eschewing lechery.

Live then aloof (no nobler life exists!) vet not puffed up.-Nirvāna's well-nigh won!

Emancipate, from passion freed, the sage in safety stands upon the Further Shore, -envied by all whom passion's bonds enslave.

	'He's my inferior', 'my better' or 'as good', —such thoughts breed strife. No strife is his who knows no grades.	[842]
	When this is meaningless, how can a Brahmin true dub this thing 'true', that 'false'? or start a wordy war?	[843]
	The homeless wanderer, who makes no intimates and scorns delights and grades, steers clear of bickerings.	[844]
	Nor will the sage profess that which his life disowns. As mud and water leave unsoiled their denizen, the lotus,—so the world and pleasures cannot soil the want-less sage's Peace.	[845]

	Ignoring what the world (nay, holy men!) impute to them, 'saints' reck not what folk say.	[859]

F. 863] Book 4, Sutta 11. Contentions	207
The Lord: Affections breed the mass of bickerings and strife, tears, grief, and selfishness, conceit, pride, calumny. With selfishness there come all bickerings and strife, —which lead to calumny.	[863]
The Enquirer: Say whence affections spring? What makes ambitions grow? What fosters hopes and fears in man for future life?	[864]
The Lord: Affections spring from wants, which make ambitions grow and foster hopes and fears in men for future life.	[865]
The Enquirer: Whence spring man's wants? Whence come all hard and fast beliefs? Whence wrath, lies, doubts, and all things else th' Recluse denounced?	[866]
The Lord: Things viewed as 'good' or 'bad' originate man's wants. Seeing things wax and wane brought hard and fast beliefs.	[867]
Wrath, doubts, and lies arose when things seemed 'good' or 'bad'. Let doubters plant their feet where knowledge guides;—th' Recluse denounced defects he knew.	[868]
The Enquirer: Whence spring things 'good' or 'bad'? What, being absent, checks their rise? And tell me too why things must wax and wane?	[869]
The Lord: Things 'good' or 'bad' are bred of Contact. Contact must be there, or they're not bred, nor would things wax and wane.	[870]

The Enquirer: From what does Contact spring? Whence comes the itch to own? What, being absent, checks the craze to deem things 'mine'? And what must disappear if Contacts are to end?	209
The Lord: Matter and Mind result in Contact. Yearnings breed the itch to have and hold; without them is no 'mine'.— End 'matter',— Contacts end.	[872]
The Enquirer: What stage is his for whom 'matter' has disappeared? Fain would I hear how pain and pleasure disappear.	[873]
The Lord: Matter will disappear when consciousness (from which obsessions all arise) is neither usual, nor crazed, nor numbed, nor lost.	[874]
The Enquirer: Though thou hast answer'd all we asked, one question more we raise for thy reply:— Do thinkers hold this life perfects man's Purity? Or is there more to come?	[875]
The Lord: Some thinkers hold this life perfects man's Purity; but other 'experts' hold the view that death ends all.	[876]
The sage knows such as 'thralls'; he knows their thraldom. Freed by knowledge, he avoids debate and wisely holds no truck with theories about an 'after-life'.	[877]

Sutta 12. Rejoinders

The Enquirer: Fixed in their pet beliefs, [878] these divers wranglers bawl—
'Reject it, and you're lost'.

Thus they contend, and dub opponents 'dolts' and 'fools'. Which of the lot is right, when all as experts pose?

The Lord: Well, if dissent denotes a 'fool' and stupid 'dolt', then all are fools and dolts,
—since each has his own view.

Or, if each rival creed proves lore and brains and wit, no 'dolts' exist,—since all alike are on a par.

I count not that as true which those affirm, who call each other 'fools'.—They call each other so, because each deems his own view 'Truth'.

The Enquirer: What some style 'truth', the rest call empty lies;—strife reigns.

The Lord: There's one sole 'Truth' (not two),
to know which bars men's strife.
But such a motley crowd of 'truths' have they evolved, that anchorites, perforce, speak not in full accord.

The Enquirer: What makes these 'experts' preach 'truths' so diverse? Is each inherited? or just a view they 've framed themselves?

	The Lord: Apart from consciousness, no diverse Truths exist. —Mere sophistry declares this 'true', and that view 'false'.	[886]
	The senses' evidence, and works, inspire such scorn for others, and such smug conviction he is right, that all his rivals rank as 'sorry, brainless fools'.	[887]
	When he admits himself to 'expert's' rank and style; —this fires his scorn anew and off he starts again.

	Delight in their dear views makes sectaries assert that all who disagree 'miss Purity and err'.	[891]

The Enquirer: Take those who dogmatize

—is blame their constant fate?
Are they not praised as well?

[896]

The Lord: Yes;—though a trifling thing is all of this (I speak of both results of strife) and does not lead to Peace.
Wherefore shun strife and aim at Peace,—which knows no strife.

No vulgar theories engage the wise. Why should the free seek bondage, when phenomena of sense appeal to them no more? [897]

They that place practice first, deeming that regimen wins Purity, take vows to practise only what their 'master taught as pure',—experts self-styled, who cling to mere phenomena!

Should one depart from 'Rule', he quakes, and frets, and pines, like travellers astray who lose their caravan. [899]

—nor their impurity; but walk aloof; ensue no 'peace' they advocate.

Through 'seeing', men just 'see' things and their attributes; or, having 'seen', can 'know' just that—and nothing more. But, 'see' they much, or 'see' they little, wise men say:—'Not thus comes "Purity".'

No dogmatist can win, by self-concocted views, the way to Purity. Mere prepossessions point his road to 'Light'; he 'sees' his old-time 'Purity'.

No 'Brahmin true' attains the goal by mere research; no partisan is he, nor brother-sectary; all vulgar theories—which others toil to learn he knows, but heeds them not.

From earthly trammels freed, aloof from party broils, at peace where peace has fled, th' unheeding sage ignores what others toil to learn.

From whilom Cankers purged, with no fresh growths afoot, from lusts and dogmas free, quit too of theories, he goes his stainless way, devoid of self-reproach.

By overcoming all the theories that start from things of sense, the sage—Released, his burthen gone—has done with conduct 'meet', with abstinence, and pray'rs.

Sutta 15. The Armed Hand
As broils reveal, the armed hand breeds fear. Hear now what agitated me so sore:—	[935]
Men floundering like fish when ponds go dry; man's strife with man;—these sights affrighted me.	[936]
The world was void of substance; flux held sway; nor could I shelter find where Ills were not.	[937]
Man's doom appalled me, till—within man's heart—my gaze discerned a secret, rankling barb.	[938]
Transfix'd, the victim runs astray; but when 'tis out, he strays no more nor sinks in sloughs. [H.O.S. 37]	[939]

F. 940] Book 4, Sutta 15. The Armed Hand (Here come the Precepts.)

Steer clear of worldly trammels; stab to death [940] pleasures of sense; Nirvana be thy goal; let truth, humility, an honest heart, [941] lips slander-free, and tolerance, be thine; let greed's discomfiture proclaim the sage; farewell to slumb'ring on, to torpid sloth; [942] let indolence be banned, and pride forsworn, by minds intent upon Nirvāna's bliss; shun lying; keep thy heart from things of sense; [943] see through all pride; from license purge thy life; hug not the past or what to-day brings forth; [944] bewail not loss; nor sigh for bliss 'Above'. I call such yearning 'th' all-devouring flood'; [945] I call it being swallowed up by greed, -a shifting base, 'the bog of appetites'. The sage, the Brahmin true, who never strays [946] from truth, on solid ground has set his foot; all things forsaking, he 'to Peace has come'; wisdom is his and lore; by Doctrine taught, [947] he goes his independent, perfect way along life's path, nor envies any man. He that has triumphed over appetites [948] and burst all worldly shackles here on earth. knows neither grief o'er loss, nor haunting dread. Consume to ashes past iniquities; [949] thereafter let no fresh defilement grow: if-meantime-thou contract no current guilt, thy feet shall tread the tranquil path of Peace. [950] Whoso prefers no claim to ownership of 'personality', and so grieves not o'er what exists not,-never suffers loss. Whoso is marred by no such thoughts as —'This [951] is mine!' or 'That is theirs!' conceives no sense of ownership, nor grieves to go without. [952] Neither to grudge nor covet nor to crave, but still to keep one equal poise through all, -these blessings, I aver, await the leal.

	When cravings die, the clear-eyed sage stores up no merit nor demerit; interest in suchlike quests is merged in perfect calm.	[953]
	The sage contrasts himself with none, nor claims equality or inequality. At peace within, immune from covetise, the saint has nought to gain and naught to lose.	[954]

	of gods and men,—as stands reveal'd in Him, th' all-seeing Lord, who swept all mists away and compassed bliss, unaided and alone.	[956]
	To Buddha—so endowed, so free, so sure a guide, a question lo! I bring, to help the multitudes condemned to bondage here.	[957]
	If, now, an Almsman who abhors the world seeks out a lonely lodging,—under trees, in charnel grounds, or in a mountain cave,	[958]
	—there grisly noises haunt his lone abode, which he must stoutly brave in solitude.	[959]
	What dangers bar his still untrodden road, which he must vanquish in his loneliness?	[960]
	How should he shape his speech?—whither resort? —what pious works should mark him, resolute?	[961]
	What vows of conduct help the fixed mind (with wisdom stored and high collectedness) foulness to purge, as silversmiths the dross?	[962]
	The Lord: Hear then from me—who know—what boons lone aspirants enjoy, who loathe the world, and how their life conforms.	[963]

BOOK V. THE WAY ACROSS

Prologue

of Kosala, a learned brahmin came in aspiration for the Plane of Naught.	[976]
Near Assaka and hard by Mulaka, beside Godhāvarī's fork'd stream, he lived on wilding fruits and sustenance he culled.	[977]
Hard by, he held a thriving village-fief; its yield he lavish'd on a pious feast;	[978]
this done, he sought his hermitage once more. On his return, another brahmin came	[979]
-footsore, athirst, with muddied teeth, dust-stain'd- who asked him for five hundred pieces down!	[980]
First, begging him be seated, Bāvarī asked how he inly fared, and then replied:—	[981]
'Nothing is left of what I had to give. Forgive me, brahmin;—no such sum have I.'	[982]
'If you refuse me, may your head be split in seven bits upon the seventh day!'	[983]
With due formalities, the rascal laid this curse on Bavari,—who quaked with fear,	[984]
and took no food, but pined in anguish sore; and Reverie's delights were his no more.	[985]
To help him in his dread and woe, there came his homestead's deity, who spoke these words:—	[986]
'That greedy rascal nothing knows of heads! Of heads and riving heads he's ignorant!'	[987]
'If you know, madam, let me hear you speak of heads and riving heads; I yearn to know.'	[988]
'I too know nothing, and am ignorant; 'tis only "Conquerors" who know these things.'	[989]
'Who then in all the wide, wide world does know of heads and riving heads? Sprite, tell me this.'	[990]

	The Lord of All-Enlightenment is he, in ev'ry outlook versed; all ken and might is his; his gaze all outlooks penetrates; by subjugating all phenomena life's stuff is spent, and he has won Release.	[992]
	Th' Enlighten'd and All-seeing Lord is he, who here on earth proclaims his Doctrine's truth. Go, ask of him; and he will make all clear'.	[993]
	"The All-Enlighten'd'—At that name's mere sound, elation seized on Bāvarī; his grief abated; joy abounding filled his breast.	[994]
	Then Bāvarī, elate with joy, excitedly besought the sprite to name the village, town, or realm where dwelt this Lord of Lords, that they might go and render homage due to th' All-Enlighten'd, prince of all mankind.	[995]
	'At Sāvatthī, beneath a roof in Kosala, the Victor dwells, profound in lore, of searching wit. This matchless Sákyán, from Cankers wholly free, —this paragon of men— knows well how heads are split.	[996]
	Then Bāvarī addressed his following of brahmins, masters of the runes, and said:— 'Draw near, young brahmins; list to what I say!	[997]
	Lo! One whose advent in the world is rare, to-day is here on earth,—famed far and wide as "th' All-Enlighten'd". Speed to Sāvatthī, and there behold mankind's unchallenged best.'	[998]

Book 5, Prologue	239
To one who bears those two and thirty marks, two walks of life are open,—and no third.	[1001]
If house and home be his, the whole wide world shall own his sway. On righteousness shall rest his rule, and not on cudgel or on sword.	[1002]
But if from home to homelessness he goes, he strips the veil from things, and so becomes the peerless All-Enlighten'd Arahat.	[1003]
Frame questions mentally about my birth, and clan, and marks, and runes, and pupils taught, —and heads and riving heads. Your questions frame,	[1004]
and, if he Buddha be of boundless ken, his lips will answer what your minds have asked.'	[1005]
At Bāvarī's behest went sixteen youths, —named Ájitá and Tissa Métteyyá, and Púnnaká and kindly Méttagū	[1006]
—with Úpasīva, Nanda, Dhótaká, and Hémaká, Todéyya, Kappa too, and learned Jatukannī, Údaya,	[1007]
Bhadrāvudha, the brahmin Pósālá, quick Mogharāja, and sage Pingiya.	[1008]
Each led his train of pupils; each was famed throughout the world; they all loved Reverie; they all could conjure up their former lives.	[1009]
Of Bāvarī these took devout farewell, then northwards went, hide-clad, with matted hair,	[1010]
through Pátiṭṭhān in Múļaká, through Old Mahíssatí, Ujjéni, Gónaddhá,	[1011]
then Védisá 'the Weald', Kosámbī next, Sākéta, Sāvatthī (of cities queen), then Sétavyá, and Kápilávatthú,	[1012]
past Kúsinārā town, past Pāvā too, that home of opulence, past Vésālī, thence on to Mágadhá's proud capital, and so to Rock-Shrine, fair, delectable.	[1013]
As thirsty folk to cooling waters haste, as merchants wealth pursue, as men forspent with heat seek shade, these scaled the mountain-side.	[1014]

1015]	Book 5, Prologue	241
	In conclave, by his Almsmen girt around, the Lord was teaching them the Doctrine's truths and like a lion's roar his voice rang out.	[1015]
	To Ájitá the All-Enlighten'd seemed the radiant sun, or mid-month's moon at full!	[1016]
	A survey of his frame—with marks complete—filled Ájitá with joy; in reverence he stood and framed these questions in his mind:—
	'Declare our teacher's birth, and clan, and marks, what runes he knows, what pupils learn of him.'	[1018]
The Lord	: Six-score years old, a Bāvarī by clan, he bears three marks; he knows the Vedas three;	[1019] is versed in marks and scholarship; instructs five hundred youths; is perfect in his creed.	[1020]
Ajita	Detail the marks he bears, thou matchless man. Cravings' uprooter! Leave us not in doubt.	[1021]
The Lord	: His tongue can hide his face; a downy tuft divides his brows; his privities are sheathed.	[1022]
	(Hearing replies to questions heard by none, all present raised their folded palms in awe,	[1023]
	wond'ring what godhead—Indra?—or Brahmá?—was thinking questions; who received replies.)	[1024]
Ajita	: Of heads and riving heads, asks Bāvarī. Explain this, Lord; dispel our doubts, o sage.	[1025]
The Lord	The head is Ignorance,—which Knowledge rives, Knowledge informed by faith and mindfulness, by earnest heart and mind, by eager zeal.	[1026]
	With deep emotion thrilled, the brahmin youth his shoulder bared in homage to the Lord, and bowed his head before the Master's feet.	[1027]
Ajita	e: O sir (he cried), the brahmin Bāvarī, with all his pupils, here adores thy feet in heartfelt thankfulness, All-seeing Lord!	[1028]
The Lord	!: May all go well with Bāvarī and train, —and thee, young brahmin! Length of days be thine! [H.O.S. 27]	[1029] or anyone's. Ask whatsoe'er you will. The All-Enlighten'd having granted leave, first Ájitá took seat and folded palms of humble supplication, as he asked his question of the Lord who Found the Truth:	[1031]

	Ajita's Question (i)
Ajita:	What shrouds the world? What stops its being seen? And what defiles, what threatens it, say you?	[1032]
The Lord:	'Tis Ignorance which shrouds the world; 'tis wants and sloth which stop its being clearly seen. Cravings (say I) defile, Ills threaten it.
Ajita:	The tides of evil surge around. What force can dam them? Say what curb have they? what bar?	[1034]
The Lord:	'Tis mindfulness dams evil's tides. They have a curb (say I);—'tis Knowledge bars their flow.	[1035]
Ajita:	Prithee, take knowledge, and take mindfulness, and with them Individuality. I pray you say what lays this last to rest?	[1036]
The Lord:	Your question, Ajitá, I answer thus:— Ere Individuality can cease, th' informing mind must first be laid to rest.	[1037]
Ajita:	Take experts now, and aspirants, and men at large. What way of life do you prescribe?	[1038]
The Lord.	To pleasure deaf, with undistracted mind, above phenomena, leave house and home to be an Almsman watchful and alert.	[1039]

	Jatukaṇṇī's Question (xi)
Jatuk	anni: News of a 'Victor', dead to appetites, and safe beyond this welter, brings me here to beg the Lord (on whom omniscience flashed sudden and entire) to shew the way of Peace.	[1096]
	For, as the sunlight dominates the earth, so moves the sov'ran Lord to dominate o'er appetites. Sage, teach my ignorance thy Truth, that I on earth may slough mortality.	[1097]
The Lord:	Get rid of appetite for pleasure's gauds; peace in Renunciation find; let nought find lodgment, nought require to be expelled.	[1098]
	Consume to ashes past iniquities; thereafter let no fresh defilement grow; if—meantime—thou contract no current guilt, thy feet shall tread the tranquil path of Peace.	[1099]
	If, brahmin, Personality has lost its fascination, Cankers never rise to bind man thrall and vassal unto Death.	[1100]

Posāla's Question (xiv)

Posala: I come to question him who reads the past. who yearns for nothing, entertains no doubts, and sounds the depths of ev'ry mental state.

> I ask thee, Sákyán, what lore is his who scans the Formless, disregards mere Form, and finds-within, without-just Nothingness. I ask:-Can such a man go further still?

[1113]

The Lord: Through comprehending each and ev'ry stage which mind's accumulations reach, He knows (who 'found the Truth'), the stage attained by him you cite and what Release his stage ensures.

> Your Brahmin who has greatly lived, has grasped from whence proceeds the sense of Nothingness, and comprehended joys as 'binding chains', -Such knowledge true your Brahmin has achieved.

[1115]

Mogharāja's Question (xv)

[1116] Mogharāja: Twice have I asked thee, Sákyán, yet got no answer. 'But the third time' (rumour says) 'the godlike sage at last vouchsafes reply.'

Thy views of this and other worlds and skies I know not, Gotama, but hither come to ask of thee, thou sage supreme, the way to view the world, to be unseen by Death.

[1118]

The Lord: Then never cease to view the world as void, abjuring 'Personality', till Death be overthrown, and thou by him unseen.

Pingiya's Question (xvi)

[1120]

and hard my hearing grows.

Lest I in folly die, teach me on earth to learn how birth and eld to end

[1121]

The Lord: In view of th' havoc wrought in men by things of sense (senses plague heedless men!), take heed to scout them all and so escape rebirth.

Pingiya: Ten realms there are in all:—above, beneath; north, south, east, west, and four between; in none of these has aught escaped thy mind or ken!

Teach me on earth to learn how birth and eld to end.

The Lord: Observing Craving's slaves harassed and spent with eld, take heed, O Pingiya, and diligently seek to root all Craving out and so escape rebirth.

Thus spoke the Lord as he was dwelling among the people of Magadha at Rock-Shrine, when, in response to the train of sixteen brahmins, he answered all their successive questions. Anyone who, comprehending the import of each several question and the Doctrine involved, walks conformably to the plenitude of the Doctrine, will assuredly pass beyond death and eld. For such states of mind 'conduct to the shore beyond'; and therefore this exposition of Doctrine is styled—'The Way Across'.

Came Ájitá and Tissa Métteyyá and Púnnaká and kindly Méttagú, with Úpasīva, Nanda, Dhótaká. [1124] mahodadhim hamsor iv ajjhapatto.

and Hémaká, Todéyya, Káppa too, the learned Jatukaṇṇī, Ūdayá, Bhadrávudhá, the brahmin Pósālá, quick Mógharājā, Píngiyá the sage.

These came to Buddha, blameless sage, and asked their searching questions of the matchless Lord, who answer'd all they asked with words of truth which satisfied those brahmins in their quest. [1127]

And, being satisfied, they all embraced the higher life as followers convinced of that all-seeing Kinsman of the Sun, Lord of Enlightenment, supreme in Lore.

Now, whoso walks as Buddha's answers teach, shall win Across and gain the Shore Beyond, —shall win across, along that Way of Ways which guides men safely o'er the surge of life and so is rightly styled 'the Way Across'.

[1129]

[1130]

[Pingiya to Bāvarī (on return).]

'The Way Across' my lips shall now proclaim.
As he discerned it, so he set it forth,
—that spotless, wisest Lord, above delights and yearnings. Wherefore should he publish lies?

[1131]

Come, let me tell the lovely utterance of him whom crassness smirches not, nor pride besets, nor foul hypocrisy invades:— [1132]

The darkness he dispels,
—the Buddha, who sees all,
who plumbs the universe,
and overcomes rebirth,
in whom no Cankers dwell, who triumphs o'er all Ill.
Brahmin, I serve 'Truth's Lord'.

[1133]

As birds desert the brake for woodlands bountiful, so I quit teachers blind and, like the swan, have gained the ocean's amplitude.

	The only things I learned from those who taught me, ere I heard what Gotama proclaimed, were hearsay origins and destinies, —mere hearsay, fostering perplexities.	[1135]
	As in lone splendour shines a matchless gem, dispelling darkness, spreading light around, —so shines th' abounding lore of Gotama and his abounding wit to comprehend.	[1136]
	From him I learn'd his Doctrine,—potent here and now, yet outside time—which, utterly destroying Cravings, brings man saving health,—that peerless Doctrine without counterpart.	[1137]
Bāvarī.	Why then absent yourself one moment's space from Gotama's abounding wit and lore,	[1138]
	from whom you learn'd his Doctrine,—potent here and now, yet outside time—which, utterly destroying Cravings, brings man saving health,—that peerless Doctrine, without counterpart?	[1139]

	My mind has eyes to see him, brahmin, night and day; in lauding him I spend my nights, and never seem from him to be away.	[1142]
	His teachings still engage faith, zest, mind, vigilance; and wheresoe'er he turns, I too am thither drawn.	[1143]

	As through life's sloughs from knoll to knoll I flounder'd on, mine eyes beheld the Lord of All-Enlightenment, in whom no Cankers dwell, who found the 'Way Across'.	[1145]
The I	ord: As trust saved Vakkali, and saved Bhadrāvudha, as trust saved Aļavi, so Pingiya, evince an equal trust, and thou shalt pass beyond the grisly realms of Death.	[1146]
Pingiya:	My gladness grows the greater as I hear the sage's words. The All-Enlighten'd Lord has stripped away the veil from things; his mind is all-embracing, ready-witted, sure.	[1147]
	Clear vision into things sublime has brought things great and small within the Master's ken. He solves all doubts, till doubters doubt no more.	[1148]
	To th' unsurpassable, th' unchangeable, which has no counterpart, assuredly I shall attain; no doubt of this have I. Account me, Lord, as winning this Release.	[1149]

PREFATORY NOTE

The Harvard Oriental Series was founded in 1891. It aims to make available for us people of the West the incomparable lessons which (if we be wise enough to maintain the teachable habit of mind) the Wise Men of the East can teach us. These lessons concern mutual good will as between persons and nations, repose of spirit by the overcoming of ill will and worry and hurry, moderation of our desires, the simple life, and above all, the search after God, and the realization — whether by reasoning or by faith — of the divine immanence.

Buddha (563–483 B.C.) was the greatest teacher of pre-Christian Asia. His precepts and example have been or are an untold blessing to India and Ceylon and the Far East. The West and the Far East have now become near neighbors. From the responsibilities and the consequent results of such neighborhood there is no escape. Already, across the Pacific, there is at work an interchange of mighty influences that will affect profoundly, for better, for worse, the politics and literature and philosophy and religion and morals of both East and West, in short, the habits of mind of both hemispheres.

The first league of nations, we are told, was the International Telegraphic Union (1865); and the second was the Universal Postal Union. A concrete example, say of a universal tariff truce, if strikingly successful, might prove to be the most effective possible world-lesson. Such agencies of world-progress, involving for each member a partial surrender of individual freedom, are now many and various. Their logical outcome is a League of All Nations and a World Court and the outlawry of war. To make such outlawry effective, mutual distrust and fear must give way to a pervading spirit of good will.

For working out this miracle, we need everywhere, as leaders, men of action who can command the sympathies and enthusiasm of great masses. And behind these leaders must stand scholars who know what the best and noblest achievements of the East and of the West are, and who can bring them to bear upon the life and ways of thought of the West and of the East. The work of the scholar is in vital relation with the practical needs of today.

Bhava-bhuti's Later Rama-history, Part 3, text-criticism etc., volume 23*

Of the above-listed forty volumes, nine are marked with a star to show that they are not yet actually issued. But of those nine, not less than seven have a good chance of being soon issued; for each of the seven is all, or nearly all, in type or printed. The seven volumes are: three of Rig-Voda, two of Buddha-ghosa, one of Indian Epigrams, and one (Part 2, text) of the Rama-play. — Thus, happly, there remain only two volumes of less assured future: they are Part 3 of the Rama-play, and the Rig-Voda Index.

Foreign Governments and various Learned Corporations, during the forty-odd years in which the volumes of the Harvard Oriental Series have been appearing, have intimated their confidence in the value and trustworthiness of these works by conferring upon the responsible editor such titles as Honorary Fellow or Correspondent or the like. — Of these public marks of confidence in the Series, the Harvard University Press, as its official Publisher and in these advertising-pages, would mention the following:

From the Government of India, Hon. Correspondent (1912) of the Archæological Department; from the Gov't of French Indo-China, Hon. Life-member of the École Française d'Extrême Orient; from the University of Aberdeen on her Four-hundredth Anniversary (1906), and from Yale University (in 1902), Honorary Doctor of Laws;

HARVARD ORIENTAL SERIES

LIST OF THE HARVARD ORIENTAL SERIES

REVISED TO DECEMBER, 1932

- Volume 1. Játaka-Mālā. Stories of Buddha's former incarnations, by Ārya Çūra. Edited in Sanskrit (Nāgarī letters) by Professor Hendrik Kern, University Leiden, Netherlands. 1891. Second issue, 1914. Pages, 270. Royal 8'. Out of print.
 - A masterpiece, as to language and style and metrical form, of Buddhist literature of the Northern Canon. By the Honorable (ārya) Cūra. Stories used as homilies in old Buddhist monasteries. Editio princeps. Kern (1833-1917), long the honored Dean of the Dutch Orientalists, thought that Cūra flourished not far from 600 A.D., or earlier. English translation by Speyer, London, 1895, Frowde.
- Volume 2. Sānkhya-Pravachana-Bhāshya, or Commentary on the Exposition of the Sānkhya philosophy. By Vijnāna-Bhikshu. Edited in Sanskrit [Roman letters] by Professor Richard Garre, University of Tübingen, Germany. 1895. Pages, 210. Royal 8°. Out of print.

Sānkhya is dualistic. It recognizes souls and primeval matter, but not God. Vijāāna, however, is a pronounced theist. But in spite of his distortions of the original system, his Commentary (about 1550 A.D.) is the fullest source that we have for a knowledge of the Sānkhya system, and one of the most important (Garbe's Preface). Garbe studied the whole work with Bhāgavata Āchārya in Benares. German translation by Garbe, Leipzig, 1889, Brockhaus. Partial English version in J. R. Ballantyne's The Sānkhya Aphorisms of Kapila, London, 1885, Trübner.

Volume 3. Buddhism in Translations. Passages selected from the Buddhist sacred books, and translated from the original Pali into English, by Henray CLAREE WARREN, late of Cambridge, Massachusetts. 1896. Eighth issue, 1922. Pages, 522. Royal 8. Price, $3. Of Warren's Buddhism, a seventh issue, abridged, giving the Life of Buddha, for circulation in India, was published in 1922. Pages, 173. Strong paper covers. Royal 8°. Price, $1.—The Warren Memorial (see below) was also reprinted in both the seventh and eighth issues.

Buddhism portrayed in the words of the Buddhists themselves. The life of Buddha (a beautiful narrative), his teachings, and his monastic order form the substance of this work. The Pāli passages, done into vigorous English and accurately rendered, are chosen with such broad and learned circumspection that they make a systematically complete presentation of their difficult subject. Warren's material is drawn straight from the fountain-head. It is this fact that has given to his work an abiding importance and value. It has been highly praised by competent judges. Moreover, it has enjoyed a very wide circulation in America and Europe and the Orient. And nearly half of the work was included by President Eliot in The Harvard Classics (New York, P. F. Collier and Son), of which a quarter of a million sets and more have been sold. The usefulness of Warren's work has thus been incalculably enhanced.

The life of Henry Warren as a scholar is memorable in the annals of American learning. A brief memorial of his life and public services is appended to volume 30 of this Series, of which he was joint-founder. It is also issued with the Descriptive List of this Series (see above, page 1). The List may be had, free, upon application to the Harvard University Press.

Volume 4. Karpūra-Mañjari. A drama by the Indian poet Rāja-çekhara (900 A.D.). Critically edited in the original Prākrit [Nāgarī letters], with a glossarial index, and an essay on the life and writings of the poet, by Stein Korow, Professor of Indic Philology at the University of Christiania, Norway, and Epigraphist to the Government of India.

— And translated into English with introduction and notes, by C. R. LANMAN. 1901.

Pages, 318. Royal 8°. Price, $5.

A play of court-intrigue, and the only extant drama written entirely in Prākrit. It presents interesting parallels with the Braggart Soldier of Plautus.

Volumes 5 and 6. Brhad-Devatā (attributed to Çāunaka), a summary of the deities and myths of the Rig-Veda. Critically edited in the original Sanskrit [Nāgari letters], with an introduction and seven appendices [volume 5], and translated into English with critical and illustrative notes [volume 6], by Professor ARTHUR ANTHONY MACDONELL, University of Oxford. 1904. Pages, 234 + 350 = 584. Royal 8°. Not sold separately. Price. 87.50.

The Great-Deity (-book), "hardly later than 400 B.C.," is one of the oldest books ancillary to the Rig-Veda. It includes very ancient epic material: so the story of Urvagi, the nymph that loved a mortal (whence Kālidāsa's great drama, Urvagi). The text is edited in a way that meets the most rigorous demands of exact philological criticism. The typographic presentation of text, version, and notes (critical and expository) is a model of convenience.

Volumes 7 and 8. Atharva-Veda. Translated, with a critical and exegetical commentary, by William Dwight Whitney, late Professor of Sanskrit in Yale University, Editor-in-Chief of The Century Dictionary, an Encyclopedic Lexicon of the English Language.—Revised and brought nearer to completion and edited by C. R. Lanman. 1905. Pages, 1212. Super-royal 8°. Not sold separately. Price, $15.

The Atharva-Veda is, next after the Rig-Veda, the most important of the oldest texts of India. Whitney (1827–1894) was the most eminent American philologist of his century, and these monumental volumes form the crowning achievement of his life-long labors as an Indianist. For his translation, he expressly disclaims finality; but his austere self-restraint, resisting all allurements of fanciful interpretation, makes of his version, when taken with his critical and exegetical commentary, the sure point of departure for future study of this Veda and for its final comprehension.

The text-critical notes form the most important single item of the work. These give the various readings of the "authorities." The term "authorities "includes not only manuscripts (of Europe, India, Kashmir), but also living reciters (the Hindu equivalents, and in some respects the superiors, of manuscripts); and, in addition, the corresponding (and often variant) passages of the other Vedas. Whitney gives also the data of the scholiast as to authorship and divinity and meter of each stanza; extracts from the ancillary literature concerning ritual and exegesis; and a literal translation. Version and Comment proceed pari passu. Prefixed is an elaborate historical and critical introduction, and a sketch of Whitney's life, with a noble medallion portrait. A leaf of the birch-bark ms. from Kashmir is beautifully reproduced in color. The typography is strikingly clear.

Few texts of antiquity have been issued with appurtenant critical material of so large scope. And never before or since has the material for the critical study of an extensive Vedic text been so comprehensively and systematically gathered from so multifarious sources, and presented with masterly accuracy in so well-digested form.

Volume 9. The Little Clay Cart (Mrc-chakaţika). A Hindu drama attributed to King Shddraka. Translated from the original Sanskrit and Prākrits into English prose and verse by Arthur William Ryder, Instructor in Sanskrit in Harvard University. 1905. Pages, 207. Royal 8°. Price, §3.

A play of such variety, humor, and swift-moving action, that it has often been produced on the modern stage. Version, true and spirited. "The champagne has been decanted, and has not lost its fizz." Noble typography (Merrymount Press). Most books of this Series are technical. This one, like Warren's Buddhism, may be happily chosen as a gift-book.

Volume 10. Vedic Concordance: being an alphabetic index to every line of every stanza of the published Vedic literature and to the liturgical formulas thereof, that is, an index [in Roman letters] to the Vedic mantras, together with an account of their variations in the different Vedic books. By Professor Maurice Bloomffeld, of the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. 1906. Pages, 1102. Royal 4°. Price, $25.

The Vedas are, in general, the oldest extant records of the antiquity of India, and indeed of Indo-European antiquity. They are the sacred books of the oldest religion of the Hindus. They represent parts of a mass of traditional material, current in the various schools of Vedic learning, and handed down from teacher to pupil by word of mouth. What was originally one and the same stanza, appears in the texts of the various schools in more or less varying forms. The variations are often such as appear in the varying forms of popular ballads or of church hymns. Thus it happens that the texts of these different Vedic schools are often virtually related to each other and to their presumable original, as are the several kindred manuscripts of (let us say) a Greek play to each other and to the archetype from which they are descended. The comparison of these variant forms of a given text is often indispensable for ascertaining its original form and true meaning. This comparison is just what the Concordance enables us easily to effect. It is a tool of the very first importance for future editors and revisers and translators of Vedic texts.

The Concordance covers nearly all the important published texts, and is in one single alphabetic arrangement and one single volume. It is a royal quarto of over 1100 pages, of double columns, containing 125,000 lines or more. For the lines of the Rig-Veda alone, about 40,000 entries are required. The lines of the Atharva-Veda by themselves would require over 18,000 entries, but are often merged with those of their Rig-Veda correspondents. No less than 119 texts have been drawn upon for contributions to the work.

The book was printed (in the early years of the century) in a limited edition of 1000 copies, now half exhausted; and was printed, not from electrotype plates, but from type. The expense in money alone, to say nothing of scholarly labor, was about seven thousand dollars. It is not likely that any publisher or scholar will soon undertake a new edition. For many decades, doubtless, the work will maintain its value unimpaired, an enduring monument to the industry and learning and resolute will of Professor Bloomfield.

- Volume 11. The Pañcha-tantra: a collection of ancient Hindu tales, in the recension (called Pańchākhyānaka, and dated 1199 A.D.) of the Jaina monk, Pūrna-bhadra, critically edited in the original Sanskrit [in Nāgari letters; and, for the sake of beginners, with word-division] by Dr. JOHANNES HERTEL, Professor am königlichen Realgymnasium, Doebeln, Saxony. 1908. Pages, 344. Royal 8°.
- Volume 12. The Pañchatantra-text of Purnabhadra: critical introduction and list of variants. By Professor Hertel. 1912. Pages, 246. Royal 8°.
- Volume 13. The Pafichatantra-text of Pürnabhadra, and its relation to texts of allied recensions, as shown in Parallel Specimens. By Professor Hertel. 1912. Pages, 10: and 19 sheets, mounted on guards and issued in atlas-form. Royal 8°. Vols. 11-13 not sold separately. Price of all three together. $5.
- Volume 14. The Pañchatantra: a collection of ancient Hindu tales, in its oldest recension, the Kashmirian, entitled Tantrākhyāyika. The original Sanskrit text [in Nāgarī letters], editio minor, reprinted from the critical editio major which was made for the Königliche Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften su Göttingen, by Professor HERTEL. 1915. Pages, 160. Royal 8°. Price, $4.

For two thousand years and more, the tales of the Panchatantra have instructed and delighted the Hindus. The Panchatantra has exercised a greater influence than any other work of India upon the literature of the world. It was the Panchatantra that formed the basis of the studies of the immortal pioneer in the field of comparative literature, Theodor Benfey. His Pantsohatantra laid the foundation of the scientific treatment of the history of the fable. From the Panchatantra there came the lost Pahlavi translation, among whose effluxes are some of the most famous books of southwestern Asia and of Europe, the Arabic Kalilah and Dimnah, the Directorium of John of Capua (1270), the Buch der Beispiele (1483) in German of great vigor and beauty,—and so on, down to that gem of racy Tudor English, Sir Thomas North's translation of Doni (1570), reprinted by Joseph Jacobs, London, 1888.

Hertel gives us here one recension of known authorship and date (1199), and another, the Kashmirian, many centuries older. To volume 11, Lanman adds an essay on The Externals of Indian Books. Of the Kashmirian recension, Hertel made a German version (Berlin, 1909, Teubner). The typography of both editions is clear and beautiful. The confusing emboxments of the stories (a second in the first, a third in the second, and so on) are disentangled in a most ingenious and simple way.

Volume 15. Bhāravi's poem Kirātārjunīya, or Arjuna's combat with the Kirāta. Translated from the original Sanskrit into German, and explained, by Carl Cappeller, Professor at the University of Jena. 1912. Pages, 232. Royal 8°. Price, $3.50.

The subject-matter is taken from the great epic of India, the Mahā-Bhārata. Like the Ajax of Sophoeles as compared with the Ajax of Homer, this poem is an instructive example for the student of literary evolution or literary genetics. For centuries it has been acknowledged in India as one of the six Mahā-kāvyas or most distinguished specimens of artificial poetry, a masterpiece of its kind.

Volume 16. Çakuntalā, a Hindu drama by Kālidāsa: the Bengāli recension, critically edited in the original Sanskrit and Prākrits by RICHARD PISCHEL, late Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Berlin. 1922. Pages, 280. Royal 8°. Price, $5.

As descendants of Bhărata, the Hindus are called Bhāratans. Their "continent" is called Bhārata-varsha, and their great epic is called the Great Bhāratan (Story or Fight), Mahā-Bhārata. Çakuntalā is the mother of Bhārata, and the beautiful story of her birth and life is told in the Great Epic. This play is a dramatization of that story, and is the masterpiece of the literature of India.

In 1898, Pischel wrote: "Es ist der sehnlichste Wunsch meines Lebens eine korrekte Ausgabe zu machen." His Präkrit Grammar was off his hands in 1900. In 1902 he was called to the Berlin professorship. The six years of his tenancy were crowded with toil (finds from Chinese Turkestan, etc.). Then came the call to Calcutta, and, in 1908, his death at the threshold of India. Under many difficulties, the book (all but a couple of sheets) was printed at Stuttgart (Kohlhammer). Then came the world-conflagration.

. The printed sheets reached America November 28, 1923.

Volume 17. The Yoga-system of Patañjali, or the ancient Hindu doctrine of concentration of mind. Embracing the Mnemonic Rules, called Yoga-sūtras, of Patañjali; and the Comment, called Yoga-būtshya, attributed to Veda-Vyāsa; and the Explanation, called Tattva-vāiçāradi, of Vāchaspati-Miçra. Translated from the original Sanskrit by James Hatgernon Woods, Professor of Philosophy in Harvard University. 1914. Second issue, 1927. Pages, 422. Royal 8°. Price $5.

Three works in one pair of covers. The Rules are a set of mental pegs on which to hang the principles and precepts of a system which you must learn from the living teacher of your "school." The Comment is a reinvestiture of the skeleton of the Rules with the flesh and blood of comprehensible details. And the Explanation is of course a commentary on the Comment. The Comment is the oldest written systematic exposition of Yoga-doctrine in Sanskrit that we possess.

Of the Hindu philosophies, by far the most important are the ancient dualism called Sānkhya, the monism of the Vedānta, and the Yoga-system. Kāutīlya, prime-minister of Chandragupta (300 B.C.), mentions Sānkhya and Yoga as current in his day. But the elements of Yoga, rigorous austerities and control of the senses, are indefinitely antique, and are one of the oldest and most striking products of the Hindu mind and character.

When one considers the floods of pseudo-scientific writing with which the propagandists of Indian "isms" in America have deluged us, one is the better prepared to appreciate the self-restraint of Dr. Woods in keeping all that pertains to miracle-mongering and sensationalism in the background, and in devoting himself to the exposition of the spiritual and intellectual aspects of Yoga. His work "continues the tradition of austere scholarship" which has, from the beginning, characterized the Harvard Oriental Series.

Volumes 18 and 19. The Veda of the Black Yajus School, entitled Täittiriya Samhitā. Translated from the original Sanskrit prose and verse, with a running commentary. By Arthur Berriedle Keith, D.C.L. (Oxford), of the Inner Temple, Barrister-atlaw, and of His Majesty's Colonial Office, sometime Acting Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Oxford, Author of 'Responsible Government in the Dominions.' Volume 18, kāṇḍas I-III; volume 19, kāṇḍas IV-VII. 1914. Pages, 464+374=838. Royal 8°. Price. $10. Not sold separately.

The Rig-Veda holds unquestioned primacy in the sacred literature of the Hindus; but their greatest medieval scholiast on the Vedas, Sāyaṇa, did not write his commentary on the Rig-Veda until after his commentary on the Yajur-Veda, because (as he expressly tells us) of the transcendent importance of the Yajur-Veda for the sacrifice. The Yajur-Veda is the Veda of sacrificial formulas. An accurate edition of the Taittirtya-Samhitā was published in 1871–2 by Weber. It waited nigh fifty years for a translator.

For the difficult task of translation, no English or American Sanskritist was so well qualified by previous studies as Keith. To it he has brought his wide and varied learning, and with such effectiveness as to produce a work, which, in spite of its large extent, is notable for its well-rounded completeness. The entire text is translated. The commentary runs pari passu with the version, embodies the gist of Sāyaṇa's scholia, and is presented with the utmost typographical perspicuity. An elaborate introduction is given, treating of the relation of this text to kindred texts, its contents, language, style, and date ('about 600 B.C.'), and the religious ritual of ancient India.

Volumes 20 and 24. Rig-Veda Repetitions. The repeated verses and distichs and stanzas of the Rig-Veda in systematic presentation and with critical discussion. By MAURICE BLOOMFIELD, Professor of Sanskrit and Comparative Philology in the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. 1916. Pages, 508 + 206 = 714. Royal 8°. Not sold separately. Price, §10.

Volume 20 contains Part 1: The repeated passages of the Rig-Veda, systematically presented in the order of the Rig-Veda, with critical comments and notes. Volume 24 contains Part 2: Comments and classifications from metrical and lexical and grammatical points of view, and from the point of view of the themes and divinities of the repeated passages. Also Part 3: Lists and indexes.

The aim of this work is to help us to understand the oldest religious document of Indo-European antiquity. The arrangement of Part 1 enables the student to bring under his eye at one time all the passages that he needs to compare, and to do so with utmost ease and speed. The material of this work was, from a typographical point of view, exceedingly intractable. The result as a whole is a marvel of clarity and convenience.

This work is the first of the natural sequels to the late Professor Bloomfield's Vedic Concordance (see above, volume 10). Others, begun or planned by him, are in course of publication by Professor Edgerron of Yale University. They are issued, under the title "Vedic Variants." by the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

Volumes 21 and 22 and 23. Rāma's Later History, or Uttara-Rāma-Charita, an ancient Hindu drama by Bhavabhtti. Critically edited in the original Sanskrit and Prākrit, with an introduction and English translation and notes and variants, etc. By Sherfad Krishna Belvalkar, Graduate Student of Harvard University. (Now, 1920, Professor of Sanskrit at Decean College, Poona, India.)

Dr. Belvalkar, when returning to India in 1914 from his studies at Harvard, shipped his manuscript-collations and other papers and his books by the German freighter, Fangturm. In August, 1914, the Fangturm was interned at the port of Palma, Balearic Islands. In 1919, she was released. In May, 1920, Dr. Belvalkar recovered his papers. Volume 21 was issued in 1915, complete.

Of volume 22, the first 92 pages, containing the text of the whole play, have been in print since January, 1915, awaiting for nigh eighteen years the recovery of the material for the rest of the book.

Of volume 23, the material included collation-sheets giving the readings of manuscripts from widely-separated parts of India, from Nepal to Madras, from Celeutta to Bombay. In spite of the generous assistance of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council, the work of getting the loan of these mss. was so great that it seemed best not to try to do it again, but to await the release of the Fangturm. — There is hope now that volumes 22 and 23 may be issued.

- Volume 21. Rāma's Later History. Part 1. Introduction and translation. (Prefixed is a convenient synoptic analysis of the play. The introduction treats of Bhavabhūti's life and date and works and includes a summary of the Rāma-story as given by the Rāmāyaṇa. Lanman adds an essay entitled 'A method for citing Sanskrit dramas.' The method is very simple and practical.) 1915. Royal 8°. Pages 190. Price, $3.
- Volume 22. Rāma's Later History. Part 2. The text, with index, glossaries, etc. (This was printed at Bombay, with the exquisitely beautiful type, newly cast for this work, of Jāvajī's Niraya Sāgara Press, and upon paper made expressly for this edition at the Wolvercote Mill of Oxford. Each Prākrit speech is followed by the Sanskrit version in immediate sequence.) See above.
- Volume 23. Rāma's Later History. Part 3. Explanatory and critical epilogue. (Critical account of the manuscripts. Running expository comment. The variant readings of the mss. The typographical 'make-up' of Comment and Variants into pages is such that they go pari passu. These epilogomena close with an essay on the two text-traditions of the play, a time-analysis, a note on the Hindu stage, etc.) See above.
- Volume 24. Rig-Veda Repetitions. Parts 2 and 3. By Professor Bloomffeld. Described above, with volume 20.

Volume 25. Rig-Veda Brāhmaṇas: The Aitareya and Kauṣitaki Brāhmaṇas of the Rig-Veda. Translated from the original Sanskrit. By Abrild Berried Ketter, D.C.L., D.Litt., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-law, Regius Professor of Sanskrit and Comparative Philology at the University of Edinburgh. 1920. Pages, 567. Royal 8°. Price $7.50.

In August, 1915, this work was ready for printing. In August, 1916, it was delivered to the Controller of the Oxford University Press. In 1918, the Press had nigh 350 men at the war. Of the older men who were left, many were busy with urgent war-work, such as a Report on Trench-fever for the American Expeditionary Force. And when, after the armistice, the printing was resumed, the author was engrossed in the work of Lord Crewe's Committee on the Home Administration of Indian Affairs.

The Vedic literature falls into three clearly sundered groups: the Vedic hymns or Mantras; the Brāhmaṇas, 'the priestlies' or 'priestly (discourses)'; and the Sūtras. Keith thinks that the Aitareya is not later than 600 s.c. The plan of the work is like that of volumes 18–19: elaborate introduction; translation; running comment on the same page. The skill of the priestly story-tellers is at its best in the splendid legend of Cunahçepa (threatened sacrifice of son by father: cf. Isaac, Iphigeneia, Phrixos). Despite the pseudo-profundity and puerility of the Brāhmaṇas, they are of genuine significance to the student of Hindu antiquity, social and religious. And they are in fact the oldest Indo-European prose extant.

Volumes 26 and 27. Vikrama's Adventures, or The Thirty-two Tales of the Throne. A collection of stories about King Vikrama, as told by the Thirty-two Statuettes that supported his throne. Edited in four different recensions of the Sanskrit original (Vikrama-charita or Sinhässana-dvätringakä) and translated into English with an introduction, by Franklin Edgerton, Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Pennsylvania. 1926. Pages, 372 + 384 = 756. Royal 8°. Not sold separately. Price, $10.

Vikrama's Adventures is one of the most famous story-books of mediæval India. Vikrama is one of the most noted quasi-historical heroes of his times. His magic throne, hidden upon his death, is discovered by a later king, Bhoja. Each of the thirty-two (dv8-tringat) statuettes that support his throne (sinhāsana) tells one story to Bhoja. Hence the alternative title. The theme of the tales is Vikrama, who is meant to serve as a kind of Hindu King Arthur, an example for real kings.

Edgerton hopes that his work may prove suggestive as a model for students of comparative literature. The text of each of the recensions (Southern, Metrical, Brief, Jain) is printed in horizontally parallel arrangement, so that the stories which correspond to each other in substance are given, each story in all four recensions, in immediate juxtapositon. And the translation is treated in like manner. Comparisons are thus facilitated to a degree never before attained in a work of this kind.

From all this, Edgerton reconstructs, with some detail, and with reasonable certainty, the original work from which the current versions are derived. This he presents in the form of a Composite Outline, the concrete solution of a problem in literary genetics.

Volumes 28 and 29 and 30. Buddhist Legends. Translated from the original Päli text of the Dhammapada Commentary, by EUGENE WATSON BURLINGAME, Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, sometime Harrison Fellow for Research at the University of Pennsylvania, and Johnston Scholar in Sanskrit at the Johns Hopkins University, and Lecturer on Päli in Yale University. 1921. Pages, 366 + 370 + 378 = 1114. Royal 8°. Not sold separately. Price $20.

Dhámma-pada, or Way of Righteousness, is the name of one of the canonical books of the Buddhist Sacred Scriptures. It consists of 423 stanzas. These are reputed to be the very words of the Buddha himself. The Dhammapada Commentary, composed by an unknown author in Ceylon about 450 a.D., purports to tell the circumstances under which Buddha uttered each one of these stanzas. In telling them, it narrates 299 stories or legends. These stories are the preponderating element of the Commentary, and it is these which are here translated.

In style and substance the tales resemble those of the famous Jātāka Book, the Buddhist Acta Sanctorum, a counterpart of the Legends of the Christian Saints. And they present many parallels to well-known stories of mediæval literature, Oriental and European. For the comparative study of such parallels, Dr. Burlingame's Synopses, clear and brief, will prove a very great convenience. His vigorous diction suggests familiarity with such "wells of English underfled" as the Bible and the Book of Common Prayer. The work gives a vivid picture of the every-day life of the ancient Buddhists — monks, nuns, lay disciples. It is thus, incidentally, an admirable preparative for the study of the more difficult Buddhist books in the original. As especially attractive stories may be cited: Lean Gotami seeks mustard-seed to cure her dead child; Murder of Great Moggallāna; Buddha falsely accused by Chinchā; Visākhā; the Hell-pot. A critical and historical introduction is prefixed. At the end is an intelligent index, modeled after that of George Foot Moore's History of Religions.

In September, 1909, Mr. Burlingame came to Harvard University to pursue his studies with Mr. Lamman. It was at the suggestion of the latter that Mr. Burlingame undertook the task of translating into English the Dhammapada Commentary. He first made a table of contents of the work, giving the title of each story and the place of its occurrence in the Burmese text and also in the Cingalese text. He added an index to the titles, and an extremely good analysis of Books 1 to 4. This most useful preliminary work was formally presented to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences on December 8, 1909, by Mr. Lanman. The manuscript of the article was delivered February 5, 1910, and published soon after as pages 467–550 of volume 45 of the Proceedings of the Academy. The admirably elaborated manuscript of the entire translation of the Dhammapada Commentary was delivered by its author on January 10, 1917, just before the War.

Volumes 31 and 32. The Religion and Philosophy of the Veda and Upanishads. By ARTHUR BURRIEDALE KEITH, D.C.L., D.Litt., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, and of the Scottish Bar; Regius Professor of Sanskrit and Comparative Philology at the University of Edinburgh; formerly of the Colonial Office. 1925. Pages 332 + 380 = 712. Not sold separately. Royal 8°. Price $10.

This work aims to deal objectively with Vedic religion and philosophy as distinctive manifestations of the Indian genius. Free use has indeed here been made of the light thrown on the development of Indian religion by modern studies of other religious origins and types. But the fundamental fact has been constantly borne in mind that the Vedic religion is a system sui generis; and that (no matter what it may share with other religions) the character of this Vedic religion, as revealed in the elaborate Vedic literature itself, is, and for us should be, throughout the whole exposition, the feature of prime importance.

Of all classes among the people of India, it was the Brahman class of whose genius the Vedic literature is the manifestation. From earlier and simpler beliefs, the Vedas have evolved a definite and strikingly individual system of deities and a unique conception of the relations of men with their gods. — Doubtless in other, non-Brahmanic, elements of the people of India, there existed beliefs and practices quite different from those recorded in the Vedas, and more in keeping with what modern study rates as marks of a low order of civilization. — But India is entitled to have her religion judged by the essential product of her highest intellects. Accordingly, in this work, the Vedic religion is presented essentially as it appears in the Vedas, and as it was no doubt felt by those responsible for these texts.

The philosophy of Vedic India, likewise, has been presented objectively, with full recognition of the fact that the Upanishads are the work of many minds, often in discord upon essentials, upon such final problems as being and non-being, birth and death, good and evil. To later thinkers of India, the Upanishads became sacred texts whose messages had to be brought into harmony. No attempt has been made to do this here. The author does not try to disguise the primitive character of much of this early thought; but on the other hand, fails not to point out the remarkable glimpses of a deep intuition into the problems of reality which the Upanishads do present. It is easy to overestimate these evidences of insight; but it is wrong to depreciate the intellectual achievement of some of these early Indian sages, or to deny their right to be set beside the great names of the pre-Socratic philosophy of Greece. — Due regard has also been had to the evolution, from the unsystematic Upanishads, of the Indian philosophical systems.

Keith's treatise is disposed under five main parts: 1. the sources; 2. the gods and demons of the Veda; 3. the Vedic ritual; 4. the spirits of the dead; 5. the philosophy of the Veda. — The references to the great mass of modern books appurtenant to the Veda are so ample that this treatise may well serve as an adequate bibliography of its vast themes. The usefulness of the work is enhanced by two indexes (they fill about 100 columns), a General index and a Sanskrit index. — Of the whole, Professor Frederick William Thomas of Oxford (Journal of Theological Studies, 31.250) writes: "A treatise of such character and compass as in the case of an ordinary scholar might well be the crown of a life's work."

Volumes 33 and 34 and 35. The Veda of Praise, or Rig-Veda. Translated from the original Sanskrit into German, with a complete running Commentary. By Karl Friedrich Gelder Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Marburg in Hesse, Editor of the Avesta or Sacred Books of the Parsees. — Part One, Books 1 to 4, revised edition, Pages, about 500; Part Two, Books 5 to 8, Pages, 444; Part Three, Books 9 and 10, Pages, 412. Pages in all three Parts, about 1356. Royal 8°. Not sold separately. Price, $20.

Geldner was born December 17, 1852 (not 1853!), and died, a little over 76 years old, early in 1929. In his twenty-first year, in 1873, he came to Tuebingen to be a pupil of Rudolph Roth, the greatest Occidental master of Vedic learning. Geldner's first book was Siebenzig Lieder des Rigveda, uebersetzt von Karl Geldner und Adolf Kaegi. Mit Beitraegen von R. Roth, 1875. Forty-eight years later, in 1923, Part One of Geldner's Der Rigveda, uebersetzt und erlaeutert, was issued. It was published under the auspices of the Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, and contains Books 1 to 4, pages 442.

In consequence of the World-war, the completion of this work seemed uncertain. The Gottingen Society graciously accepted the proposal that the Harvard Oriental Series should carry it through to the end. By 1928, the printing of Part Two, Books 5 to 8, and that of Part Three, Books 9 and 10, was finished. It remained to print a revised edition of Part One, Books 1 to 4. In spite of discouragements and obstacles, the printing of this revision was going on, when, early in 1929, Geldner suddenly died.

Whitney, the translator of the Atharva-Veda, as well as Geldner, were pupils of Roth. Both pupils devoted over fifty years of a busy life to the study and interpretation of the Vedas. The life of each was proved otherwise fruitful: Whitney's, notably by The Century Dictionary, an Encyclopedic Lexicon of the English Language; and Geldner's, notably by his edition of the Avesta. Both Vedic works, the Atharva-Veda and the Rig-Veda, may truly be said to have been on the stocks for over half a century. The issue of each was postponed by the author's death, — Whitney's for about a decade. It is reasonable to hope that Geldner's may appear in 1933.

Volume 36. Index to Geldner's Rig-Veda translated. The plans of author and editor included a Historical and Critical Epilogue, to be issued, with an Index to Parts One and Two and Three, and as Part Four, volume 36 of this Series. To avoid further delay in the distribution of the translation, the Index will be treated as a Supplement to the translation, and completed as soon as is feasible.

Volume 37. Buddha's Teachings. Being the Sutta-Nipāta or Discourse-Collection. Edited in the original Pali text, with an English version facing it. By LORD CHALMERS, G. C. B., Hon. D. Litt., Oxford. Sometime Governor of Ceylon. Sometime Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge University. 1932. Pages 326. Royal S°. Price, $5.

A word as to the English title of this volume from the publisher's point of view. For students of Pali and Buddhism, the traditional name, Sutta-Nipāta, is doubtless the best name by which to call the Pali work itself. But for the general reader, the title Discourse-Collection is far too vague to be useful. Accordingly, since the suttas or discourses are mostly didactic and pronounced by the Buddha, the difficulty is perhaps best met by calling the volume "Buddha's Teachings, being the Sutta-Nipāta or Discourse-Collection."

The Jātaka or stories of the Buddha's former births, translated from the Pali by various hands (complete in six vol's, 1895-1907), marks an epoch in Occidental studies of Buddh st literature. The first volume (stories 1-150) was done by Robert Chalmers of Oriel College, Oxford, a friend and pupil of Rhys Davids. — Three years later, continuing and completing Trenckner's edition of the Pali text of the Majjhims-Nikāya (vol. 1, 1888), Chalmers issued, in quick succession, in 1898, vol. 2, and, in 1899, vol. 3.

After long and distinguished public service, begun (1882) in Her Majesty's Treasury and covering some years as Governor of Ceylon, Lord Chalmers became, in 1924, Master of Peterhouse, the oldest of Cambridge Colleges (founded in 1284 by Hugo de Balsham, Bishop of Ely). The Master's experience in translating and editing Pali texts (Jātaka, Majjhima), his residence in Ceylon (where Buddhism is a living religion), and his command of the outcome of the work of his colleagues (notably the work of Rhys Davids, and "the illuminating labours of Mrs. Rhys Davids in interpreting philosophical terms and ideas"), - these are some of the elements of a rare equipment for the exceedingly hard and important task of translating Buddha's teachings as set forth in the Suttas or Discourses or Dialogues of the Majjhima. And for that task, the years of relative leisure in Peterhouse (1924-1931) offered the occasion. Lord Chalmers made those years signally fruitful by issuing, promptly, and again in quick succession (1926, 1927), the two volumes of his translation. To us moderns, the teachings of the Majihima are strange in form and alien in substance. That substance is so thoroughly done into genuine English that the version has become a true rendering. We can understand it without comments and without knowing the original Pali. By cutting out the profuse and tiresome repetitions, the three volumes of the Pali have become two in the English. With Hesiod, we may say, The half is more than the whole, πλέον ήμισυ παντός.

His Majjhima work ended, with unabated vigor Lord Chalmers turned to the editing and translating of Sutta-Nipāta. In his Introduction thereto, he states and weighs the facts that bear upon the age of certain parts of Sutta-Nipāta, to wit, The Way-across (book 5) and The Octads (book 4) and The Rhinoceros (Sutta 3 of book 1). These he deems "the earliest elements of our present canonical Sutta-Nipāta." For there exists a commentary, actually named Nid-desa or Ex-position, upon these "certain parts," which commentary was admitted into the Canon. And a commented text must be prior to its commentary, and is usually long prior. — Again, he holds that the narrative Suttas (1-2 of book 3), which tell of Gotama's renouncing the world and of his struggle with the Tempter, are clearly marked as primitive records by their straightforward simplicity and austere avoidance of fanciful embellishment. — Or again, for the age of some Suttas (1.12; 3.11; 4.16), he adduces the fact that they are cited in the Emperor Asoka's rock-inseriptions, of about 250 B.C.

But apart from their venerable antiquity, the Suttas of Sutta-Nipāta are of import also as Pali poetry. Take for example the dramatic scene (1.2) on some Indian Rio Grande (Mah-ttre), where Gotama, now a Buddah, meets and converts the brahmin herdsman named Wealthy. — The herdsman has worked hard and likes to tell that he is prosperous. The first two items of his boasting are that he's well-fed and well-housed. The first he expresses by the phrase 'Done is my rice,' pakk-odano. The Pali word pakka, 'cooked, done,' Anglo-Indian pucka, is common to this day in the senses 'well-done, substantial.' His meaning is 'Substantial is my food.' And for 'well-housed' he says 'My hut is snug with rain-tight thatch and cozy fire.' And adds, in smug defiance, 'So, if the heavens will, the storm may burst amain.' — Gotama gives the herdsman a Roland for his Oliver, and answers in quiet dignity, but with a pun of age-long fame, a-kkodhano, 'Without anger am I. My roof's aleak. The fires [of lust] are quenched. Let the storm burst.'

Herdsman: Pakk-odano, Done is my broth = My food is drest. Gotama: A-kkodhano, None am I wroth = My mood is blest.

And so on to the end, Gotama matches each wholesome joy of the layman's life with a higher joy of the spiritual quest. The storm bursts amain. The herdsman sees a new light.

The Sutta-Nipāta, taken on the whole, is the clearest extant picture of primitive Buddhism. The most practical of Buddha's Teachings is his doctrine of Goodwill. In one century or another this has proved an incalculable blessing to one people or another. So may it do again! Goodwill, beyond all else, is what the world needs just now.

Volume 38. Indian Epigrams, done out of Sanskrit into English Verse. By Charles Rockwell Lanman, Professor at Harvard University.

This is a small collection of Sanskrit epigrams, mostly done into English many years ago. They are such as the translator hoped and thought might prove acceptable as gifts to his friends. The Series, as a whole, consists mainly of books which are hard to study or even to read, and yet harder to write or even to edit. For the maker of a gift-book, near the end of his eighty-third year, — it is "Now or never."

Volumes 39 and 40. Budda-ghosa's Visuddhi-magga or Way of Salvation. Edited, in the original Pali, by the late Henry Clarke Warren, and revised by Dharma-ananda Kosambi. Pages 638. Royal 8°.

Buddha-ghosa flourished about 400 a.p. His Way of Salvation is an encyclopedia raisonnée of Buddhist Doctrine. There is a certain fitness in calling him the Saint Augustine of India. Both were men of majestic intellect and wide learning. Both were authors of works which for fifteen hundred years have maintained for themselves, each in its sphere, a place of surpassing influence. It is highly probable that Buddha-ghosa, at Great Minster in Ceylon, was composing the Visuddhi-magga at about the same time as that in which (413-428) Saint Augustine was writing The City of God.

Warren (1854-1899) planned to publish a scholarly edition of the Pali text of the Visuddhi-magga, in English letters, with English translation, index of names, and so on. - Accordingly, he had the text of the entire Visuddhi-magga copied out four times just as it stands in his four chief palm-leaf manuscripts, two Burmese and two Cingalese. These copies were made on the type-writer, and in Roman characters. The text of each manuscript was copied from beginning to end, in bits, each bit as long as the width of the paper would conveniently allow, the four corresponding bits of each manuscript in four horizontally parallel lines, and in the order B1, B2, C1, C2; and so on with the next bit. Thus the readings of any given word form a short four-line vertical column. This makes it very easy to collate the readings of the four different manuscripts and to note the points of agreement and disagreement. - Moreover, he had prepared a typewritten manuscript of the whole work which he hoped might serve as final copy for the printer. And of the English translation he had made about one third, considerable portions having already appeared in his Buddhism. — Buddha-ghosa makes constant reference to the Sacred Texts of Buddhism, quite after the manner of the Fathers of the Christian Church. And of these quotations about one half had been identified by Warren in the extensive literature from which Buddha-ghosa drew.

Shortly before Warren died, Lenman told him that he, Lanman, hoped and expected to take up the work on Buddha-ghosa's Way of Salvation and finish it. "But," he added, "the obligation to Professor Whitney is the prior one." To "revise, bring nearer to completion, and edit" and issue Whitney's Athava-Veda took much of Lanman's best working years, from Warren's death to the issue of the Whitney volumes in 1905. The general editorial conduct of the Harvard Oriental Series on the one hand, and on the other hand the work of finishing Buddha-ghosa's Way, — both these were for Lanman conflicting duties, too heavy perhaps for any one pair of shoulders.

Meantime, Buddhist scholars of Siam and Burma and Ceylon had not been idle. Their editions of Visuddhi-magga and appurtenant commentaries are in Asiatic letters. The first edition of the text of Visuddhi-magga in English letters is that of Mrs. C. A. F. Rhys Davids. On page ix of her Foreword, dated 1920, Mrs. Davids, with the modesty and unselfishness of a nobly true scholar, speaks of all these works as "error-clearing helps" of "the great edition to which my collaborators and I shall have served as stepping-stones." And now, in his turn, Henry Warren, no less true and noble, would be the first to welcome as a stepping-stone this long-delayed issue of his own work, in the same spirit of unselfish and practical devotion to the ideals of the scholar.

THE HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS

Sanskrit Reader: Text and Vocabulary and Notes. By Charles Rockwell Lanman, Wales Professor of Sanskrit at Harvard University. Seventh issue, 1920. Royal 8°. Pages, 430. Price, 53.

The Reader furnishes the text for 60 or 80 lessons, and with it the needed lexicon and notes. The notes make constant reference to Whitney's Sanskrit Grammar: see below. These two volumes supply all that is strictly indispensable for the beginner. The text is in the Oriental (Nāgarī) letters; but a transliteration of the first four pages in Roman letters is added. The Reader is designed especially to meet the needs of those who have not the aid of a teacher.

The text is chosen: 1. from Classical Sanskrit works (Nala-story, fables of Hitopadeça, "Manu's Laws"); and 2. from the Vedic literature (Rig-Veda hymns, Brāhmanas, Sūtras for wedding and burial). A literary-historical introduction is given for each kind of text. The vocabulary is in Roman letters, and is elaborated with the utmost care. Special heed is given to the development of the meanings (semantics: pāda, foot, leg, leg of lamb, quarter, quarter of a four-lined stanza, line, line of a three-lined stanza), and also to the etymological cognates in English, Greek, and so on (ta-d, $\tau \delta$, δx -t. tha-t, is-tu-d).

Parts of Nala and Hitopadesha in English letters. Prepared by C. R. Lanman. 1889, Royal 8°. Pages, 50. Price, 50 cents.

A reprint of the first 44 pages of the Reader (see above), transliterated from the Oriental characters into English letters. It corresponds page for page and line for line with its original, so that the references of the Vocabulary and Notes of the Reader apply exactly to this reprint. With the Grammar and Reader and this reprint, the student is enabled to acquire a knowledge of the structure of the Sanskrit and to do some reading, without first learning the Oriental letters.

Sanskrit Grammar: including both the Classical language, and the older dialects of Veda and Brähmana. By William Dwigher Whitner, late Professor of Sanskrit at Yale University. Fifth issue, 1923, of second edition, 1889. 8°. Pagos, 578. Price, 84.50.

The greatest extent repository of the grammatical facts concerning the Sanskrit language. A masterpiece of orderly arrangement. Prefixed is a brief account of the literature of India.

Vedanta Philosophy. Outline of the Vedanta system of philosophy according to Shankara. By Paul Deussen. Translated by James H. Woods, Professor of Philosophy at Harvard University, and Catharine B. Runkle of Cambridge, Massachusetts. Second edition. 1915. 8°. Pages, 56. Price, $1.

This book, a translation of the summary given by Deussen at the end of his monumental work, Das System des Vedanta, was first published in 1906. Since then, thanks to the learning and enthusiasm of Charles Johnston, the whole great work has been made accessible in an English version (Chicago, 1912, The Open Court Publishing Company). Nevertheless, the small book was so inexpensive and practical that a new edition was made in 1915. The summary, although brief and compact, is yet so lucid and adequate,—in short, so altogether admirable, that it is not likely soon to be superseded by a better exposition of what has been to untold millions at once a philosophy and a religion.

IN PREPARATION

Sanskrit Grammar. The essentials, in briefest form and for beginners, as to sounds and sound-changes and inflection. With an appendix of linguistic Comment, entirely separate from the Grammar, and drawn from English and Greek and Latin. By C. R. LANMAN. 1924. Royal 8°. Pages, about 50 + 50.

Of all the Indo-European languages, Sanskrit is incomparably well adapted as an elementary study for the purposes of mental discipline in general and of rigorous linguistic training in particular. The transparency of its structure is absolutely unique. The various elements - prefix, root, derivative suffix, inflectional ending - which in synthesis constitute the word, are easily made the subject of quick and certain analysis by the veriest beginner. Thus Sanskrit serves best to reveal the fundamental principles which underlie the structure of English, Greek, Latin, etc. For these have suffered linguistic erosion to such a degree that their original structural features are often no longer recognizable. The habit and power of alert observation and of linguistic reflection (such, for example, as shows you without reference to any book, the connection of batch with bake, of fil-th with foul, of gris-t with grid) are best won by the study of some foreign language. One single year of Sanskrit may, with proper books, be made so fruitful, that any intending Anglicist or Hellenist or Latinist may well hesitate to forego the unmatched opportunity which it offers for winning a habit and a power that shall enable him to tackle his English or his Greek or his Latin more vigorously and effectively.

For this purpose, the mastery of Oriental alphabets is of no use whatever. The inflections and sound-changes of Sanskrit are far less difficult than is commonly supposed, and are positively easy if you separate the difficulties of the language from those of the writing. Therefore this grammar prints all Sanskrit words in Roman letters. The use of Roman letters makes clear to the eye, instantly and without a word of comment, countless facts as to the structure and analysis of the forms. And by combining ingenious typographic arrangement with the use of Roman letters, it is possible to accomplish wonders for the visualizing memory.

The explanatory or illustrative matter, drawn from English, Greek, and Latin, will be found helpful and often entertaining. Thus palatalization (important in Sanskrit: & becomes ch, g becomes j) is illustrated by drink drench, hang hinge, and so on. The section-numbers of the Comment correspond throughout with those of the Grammar, so that reference from the one to the other is 'automatic.'

Bhāratan Readings. Easy and interesting stories from the Mahā-Bhārata in the original Sanskrit. Printed in Roman letters, with a literal English version. By C. R. LANMAN.

These show to the beginner how exceedingly easy the easy epic texts are. They are chosen with common sense and good taste, and are purged of long-winded descriptive passages. They are in simple unstilted language, entertaining, full of swift-moving action and incident. Among them are the story of Çakuntala (heroine of the masterpiece of the Hindu drama, and mother of Bhārata: see above, page 9), the Flood, the great Gambling-seene, the Night-seene on the Ganges (in which the fallen heroes come forth from the river and talk with the living), Vipula (who restrains Ruchi from a lapse of virtue by hypnotizing her), the Man in the Pit (prototype of the famous mediæval allegory), Nala and Damayantí (cut down from a thousand stanzas to a few hundred), and so on. To make easier and quicker the understanding of the text, each stanza is printed as four lines (not two), and the literal version is given in a parallel column.
